Poultry Industry Out In Force At Annual Fundraising Event

EVERETT NEWSWANGER
Editor

HERSHEY (Dauphin Co.) — About 1,300 poultry producers and agribusiness friends gathered at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center Monday night to socialize, have a scrumptious chicken dinner, and hear the world-famous Oak Ridge Boys in concert. The $100-a-plate event brings together all aspects of the poultry industry in the largest annual fundraising effort of the PennAg Poultry Council.

Just last week, PennAg Industries had an open house for their new office location off Linglestown Road, northeast of Harrisburg. They moved from Ephrata

$1,600 Each To Scholarship Winners

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Could one high school senior be an up-and-coming "dog psychologist?"

Perhaps.

Greta Feeser, one of seven Lancaster County Farm and Home Foundation Scholarship winners, wants to understand animal behavior.

Greta, honored with a $1,600 scholarship Tuesday evening, chose Juniata College. Greta said she would like to learn the "psychology of animals, and why they do what they do."

Greta, 18, daughter of Thomas and Diane Feeser, Lititz, was one of seven scholarship recipients announced Tuesday evening at the Farm and Home Center.

The Warwick senior joins fellow Warwick student Desiree Haneman, Lititz, and others as award recipients. Also honored each with a $1,600 scholarship were Diana Erb, Lancaster; Russell Howard, Strasburg; Audrey Nissley, Washington Boro; Lynn Ressler, Peach Bottom; and Ryan Wimer, Quarryville.

Greta has four years experience as a kennel assistant at the Lititz Veterinary Clinic. She credits career inspiration from Dr. Bill Whittaker at the clinic.

Greta plans to study under Juniata's pre-vet program. The college has wonderful communications regarding career placement, Greta said. "I felt a connection to the school."

Though she has worked mostly with pets, she is considering the small- and large-animal care field.

Regarding the "animal psychology" studies, she plans to continue to explore that area. If not part of the curriculum, she said she would pursue it as a "personal project."

Fellow student Desiree Haneman wants to pursue a career working, perhaps, as a caretaker in the Disneyworld Animal Kingdom in Florida helping with the African animals, she said.

Berks County Dairy Farmer Crossbreeds To Prepare For Changes

JAYNE SEBRIGHT

LIMEKILN (Berks Co.) — Dairy farmer Marlin Stoltzfus feels changes coming in the wind.

"What I see coming is more component pricing," said Stoltzfus, who milks 100 cows in Berks County. "We have to learn to make milk with forage, not grain, and we are going to need to breed for a different kind of cow."

Stoltzfus is experimenting with Normandy dairy cattle, a relatively new breed in the United States that originated from France. First arriving in the states as a beef breed, the Normandy dairy breed touts longevity, a wide heart girth, and high milk component levels.

"We've been talking dairyness for so long in the U.S. that what we're getting is frailness," said Stoltzfus. "It all starts in front of the cow. If you don't have room in the chest for a big heart, lungs, and digestive system, you're going to have problems."

Stoltzfus, who farms with his wife Ruth, took over the third-generation farm from his father. Their dairy herd includes Holsteins, Guernsey, Jerseys, and one Brown Swiss bull. Marlin and Ruth have two sons — Erick, who is a veterinary student at the University of Minnesota, and Dean, who is a machinist.

"When my father farmed, we had all Guernsey," said Stoltzfus. "But then our dairy complained because they were paying us for 6 percent test milk, so we added some Holsteins to bring the component levels down."

Now the Stoltzfus' herd is 90 percent Holsteins. "We're cross breeding a few of our Holsteins with the Normandy breed to increase the longevity and hardiness of our herd."

According to Stoltzfus, a cow should be thought of as an athlete. "She has to pump a lot of

ATLANTA, GA.

EASTERN REGION FROZEN EGGS, MAY 12, 2000. FEDERAL-STATE

Majority prices on whole eggs were irregular, majority values on other items were unchanged when compared to last week's values. Offerings were usually reported as adequate on yolks and whites but generally available on whole. The undertone was steadier but somewhat unsettled. Liquid and frozen eggs (ingredients included) processed under federal inspection in the Eastern region for the week ending May 06, 2000 were 3 % less than last week, and 5 % less than a year ago. Shell egg suppliers were fully adequate to ample for current needs.

Northeast Broiler/ Fryer Parts — Part I

ATLANTA, GA.

NORTHEAST BROILER/FRYER PARTS - PART I FEDERAL-STATE

Trucklot buying activity ranged fair to good with best interest on breast items. Offerings of bone-in breasts were scarce, however, when found, many buyers failed to make purchases due to steep asking prices. Boneless, skinless breasts were mostly short to about adequate and some out front interest was noted. All other items were mixed but generally adequate. Retail and distributive movement continued moderate to good. The market tone was fully steady to firm and bone-in breasts were in the strongest position.

DELMARVA BROILER/FRYER MARKET. FEDERAL-STATE

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds was moderate to good at most points. Activity had increased at several plants due to shipping problems being encounted at a large volume plant within the area. Offerings varied in both size and volume but were generally adequate, particularly the smaller sizes. Live supplies were mostly moderate; weights varied in a full range of light to heavy. Processing schedules were moderate in total, partially affected by the above mentioned shipping problems. Less than trucklot asking prices were unchanged at 56 to 68 cents. Trade sentiment was fully steady to firm. Most parts were held with a degree of confidence.

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO
Wed May 17, 2000
USDA-MO Dept Ag Market News

Daily National Grain Market Summary

Grain and soybean bids were steady to lower due to wet weather fore- casts and profit taking. Overnight export wheat and corn sales limited weakness. Wheat 1 to 8 cents lower. Corn steady to 1 cent lower. Sorghum steady. Soybeans 1 to 5 cents lower.

Slight declines were seen in wheat pits, Wednesday, as beneficial rains fell in winter wheat growing areas. Fair overnight export sales to Japan underpinned bids.

Corn bids were little changed after lower trading early in the day

Forecasts call for rain in the Corn Belt over the next few days. Good export demand was reported overnight for corn. Wet weather forecast for the Midwest added pressure to bean bids. Profit taking in sovbean meal also lower bean bids.

VICTORIA DAY (CANADA) MAY 22.

THE BLACK BOX

On May 26, 1995, the National Transportation Safety Board added a new regulation to existing safeguards. The decree stated that planes built before October 1, 1969, must start tracking six new kinds of information in addition to the five already being logged. New data included longitudinal acceleration, nose pitch, and engine thrust. Newer planes have about 30 parameters recorded in the famous black boxes that are recoverable after a crash. Imagine Wilbur and Orville Wright, pondering what black boxes now reveal. They would remember Lawrence Hargrave (1850-1915), inventor of the box kite that led to their first powered airplane But there's been a whole lot of invention between the box kite and the black box.

We don't know a millionth of one percent about anything.

-Thomas Edison

TIP OF THE WEEK

When on St. George (May 23) rye will hide a crow, a good harvest may be expected.

USDA-OK Dept Ag Market News
Oklahoma National Stockyards - Weekly Cattle Summary

Compared to last week: Feeder steers steady. Feeder heifers steady to 1.00 lower. Demand opened light to moderate for feeders but turned good by late morning. Token rains in parts of corn belt stimulated feeder demand as grain futures declined. Also graze-out wheat now tough and some cattle have dropped weight providing buyers with more attractive flesh conditions. Steer and heifer calves 1.00-4.00 lower with most decline on heifers. Calves mostly unweaned new crops and demand fairly good for these. Feeder cattle in medium to fleshy conditions with increased numbers toward medium flesh. Weigh-ups average to full. Quality plain to average, few attractive.

Slaughter cows and bulls 1.00 lower. Packer demand moderate at best. Demand good for replacements and pairs. Total of 385 cows and bulls sold with 45 percent to packers.

Receipts this week 13,350; last week 11,292; last year 11,697.

Supply consisted of 85 percent yearlings over 600 lbs; 12 percent calves under 600 lbs; 3 percent cows and bulls. Heifers comprised 45 percent of feeder and calf supply.

Prices follow with weighted average weight and price in parenthesis.

OPINION

Urban Pet Owners Need Nutrient Management Plans, Too

When defenders of development want to allow subdivisions in agricultural areas, they often say there will be less pollution with a field full of houses instead of pastures where manure is applied. This is a myth without merit.

Douglas Smith, extension poultry scientist at the University of Georgia says homes in a new subdivision must usually be located on at least 6/10 of an acre where septic systems are used. Lot sizes may be smaller if a sewer is in place. The home itself, a paved driveway, patio or deck, swimming pool, and any outbuildings or other structures can reduce this by another 2/10 of an acre, as these are impervious surfaces, unavailable for water runoff or percolation.

Now add an outside dog to the backyard (on approximately 2/10 of an acre). A good sized dog, such as a Labrador retriever, may excrete liquid and solid waste at an average of 2.5 pounds per day, or 913 pounds annually (depending on body weight and diet). On a per acre basis the annual manure application rate for that area is 2.3 tons per year, compared to the maximum recommended poultry litter application rate of 5 tons per acre annually for pastures. In other words, two dogs per household in a subdivision approximately equals the maximum manure loading for a given area that a broiler farm would contribute. If smaller lots are used where sewers are available, homeowners may also have cats. Or if there are more than two dogs per household, then the subdivision will greatly exceed what any agricultural operation would ever apply to the land. Plus, the storm sewers pass this pollution much quicker to the streams and lakes.

Even recalculating the manure loading based on the total subdivision area does not substantially change the numbers, as much of the area is under paved roads and many of the houses sit on what were buffer areas for the farm. In addition, many lawns are over fertilized with commercial fertilizer. Obviously, suburban homeowners are a significant threat to the environment.

So, if your local government is rezoning agricultural land for subdivisions, ask two valid questions. Why are they allowing excessive polluters into the area? And why aren't pet owners in subdivisions required to have nutrient management plans?

Now Is The Time

Lancaster County Agricultural Agent

To Produce High-Quality Alfalfa Hay

Producing high-quality alfalfa at home means dairy farmers can reduce the purchase of off-farm feeds.

According to Robert Anderson, Lancaster County extension agronomy agent, studies in Pennsylvania have shown that one way to maximize the quality of alfalfa hay is to harvest it early.

The crude protein content for alfalfa at various stages of maturity is mid-bud stage, 19.4 percent; late bud, 18.2 percent; first flower, 17.1 percent; 1/10th bloom, 15.8 percent; and beyond 1/10th, bloom 12 percent.

As the alfalfa plant matures, the percent crude protein declines. Also, by harvesting early, you may gain an extra cutting in the fall. Thus, cutting alfalfa at the proper stage of maturity is very important in achieving best quality feed for your cows.

To Control Herbicide Drift

The increase use of post-applied herbicides has brought the issue of herbicide drift to the top of the list of concerns related to the use of pesticides.

Robert Anderson, Lancaster County extension agronomy agent, reminds us that, because of the nature of applying sprays, it will be impossible to completely eliminate the problem of drift. However, applicators can reduce the risk by using appropriate equipment and basic knowledge.

Recent research evaluating nozzle type and spray pressure showed these two factors affected drift. The study found that the Drift Guard and Turbo TeeJet nozzles produced less drift than the flat fan nozzle. Also, by increasing the spray pressure, you increase the chances for drift.

Pesticide applicators should take steps to ensure that the spray equipment is set up properly to minimize drift by selecting the best nozzle, spray pressure, and boom height. They must also consider weather conditions and avoid spraying on windy days to avoid problems.

To Use Front-End Loaders Safely

A front-end loader can be a valuable addition to your tractor. The loader-tractor combination can also be dangerous if not operated properly.

Loaders can change the center of gravity and the stability of tractors, causing tipping hazards for the operator.

The following guidelines can help ensure the safety of tractor operators using front-end loaders on your farm:

- Install only loaders designed and approved by the tractor manufacturer
- Use only approved attachments for handling large bales
- Never use a loader for removing fenceposts, towing, or knocking something down
- Use ballast to correctly balance the loader and tractor from front to rear
- Use loaders for the jobs they are designed to handle
- Use a rollover protective structure (ROPS) and always wear a seat belt
- Do not exceed suggested load limits
- Carry loads at a low height and slow speed
- Never move or swing a load over people in a work area
- Always lower loads to the ground when park
- Use extra care when working on inclines
- When carrying a load, drive forward when going uphill and back downhill with loads.

ON 'REAPING' AND 'SOWING'

Background Scripture:
2 Corinthians 9.
Devotional Reading:
2 Corinthians 81-15.

I was born during "The Great Depression."

Like all of the generations that experienced that traumatic episode in American history, the Depression and the rationing of the World War II that followed it had a lasting effect upon my values.

I grew up with a " 'scarcity' mentality," a fear that there would not be enough to go around. Some 20 years ago I was challenged to minister in a situation where, instead of a salary, I would have to earn my living with fees and honoraria. I questioned how it could possibly work.

Two-plus decades later, I still can't tell you how it worked out, but only that it did. Despite the fact that I did not know where my next dollar was coming from, God always seemed to provide enough so that we were never in want. In time, I learned to trust that God would provide enough so that I could live and give.

I have not been a "fast learner." I still have to persuade myself that I can give without the assurance that I can "afford" it.

In the days when I earned a salary, it was comparatively easy to pledge a tithe. That was more an act of calculation than faith.

Today it is easier for I have experienced for myself Paul's assurance: "And God is able to provide you with every blessing in abundance, so that you may always have enough of everything and may provide in abundance for every good work" (9:8). Giving has not impaired my ability to "have enough of everything."

A FAITH PROBLEM. Living that way is a test of faith and I have come to realize that the problem of giving and living generously is essentially a faith problem. It is a contest between a "scarcity" and "abundant" perspective on life.

This goes far beyond the giving of money and material goods. As Paul puts it, "he who sows sparingly will also reap sparingly, and he who sows bountifully will also reap bountifully."

Paul, however, assures us not only that we will have enough for ourselves, but that we will have even more if we share: "He who supplies seed to the sower and bread for food will supply and multiply your resources . . ."

So long as we continue to share what God gives us, he will continue to give us more. When the lad by the Sea of Galilee shared his fish and loaves, his little was multiplied to feed the many.

A SPIRITUAL RETURN. There is a spiritual return, too: "You will be enriched in every way for great generosity, which through us will produce thanksgiving to God; for the rendering of this service not only supplies the wants of the saints but also overflows in many thanksgivings to God" (9:12).

Mere material sufficiency is not the highest reward of generosity; the opportunity to glorify God with our contribution is.

This is a law of life and I am sorry that it has taken me so long to believe, not with my mind, but with my whole being. The farmer knows that if he skimps on the seed he will skimp on the harvest. It is the difference between proclaiming cream and living skim milk.

There is one last perspective in Christian giving: "Each one must do as he has made up his mind, not reluctantly or under compulsion, for God loves a cheerful giver" (9:8).

We can be argued into giving, shamed into sharing and even tricked into benevolence, but unless we give and share willingly, we rob ourselves of the joy of giving. He who sows without cheerfulness will reap without joy.

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

By Ken Bailey
Penn State University
May 12, 2000

Imports Fall With Lower Milk Prices

-Imports drop 9 3%=20
-Demand for butter and cheese strong
-Chicago prices stable
-March cheese and butter production stable

In theory, imports of dairy products should fall as U S prices for dairy products fall That's because the advantage of lower-priced foreign dairy products diminishes as U.S prices decline to world prices That may explain why the latest USDA figures show total dairy imports for the period December 1999 through February 2000 fell 9.3 percent (see Table below) relative to the same period a year ago. My estimation is that imports of dairy products will continue to decline this year relative to a year ago

The same data also shows milk production during the period December 1999 - February 2000 was up 4.1 percent, and that commercial disappearance--which includes exports--was up 4.6 percent (on a milkfat basis). For individual dairy products, consumption during the same period was as follows: butter up 7.1 percent, American cheese up 6 3 percent, other cheese up 8 5 percent, and nonfat dry milk down 29 8 percent. All these figures are relative to the same period a year ago.

It must be rewarding to know that a strong U.S economy is translating into strong sales for butter and cheese.

So if consumption is greater than production (slightly), why aren't dairy prices doing any better than they are? For one, beginning stocks of dairy products for this period was well above year ago levels. Despite great sales, we still need time to sell all these surplus stocks. Second, the market for cheese and butter works off of psychology. The outlook is for continued surplus milk production, and that means surplus production of butter and cheese. That could change, however, if strong demand continues and dairy production regions face periods of hot/dry weather.

USDA released the Dairy Products report last week. Those numbers were a bit surprising. We know that milk production has been well above year ago

The association provides valuable industry coordination and a first-line defense against an onslaught of regulations and critics. Many of PennAg's programs are also educational. And the Pennsylvania Egg Quality to be more centralized for their members and to be closer to the legislative process where PennAg has a strong voice for agriculture.

The banquet helps raise a large portion of the Poultry Council's budget for the year. Assurance Program is a model for the nation.

The Oak Ridge Boys have been performing for three decades, and have chart-topping hits, million-selling albums, an endless highway of personal appearances, and a permanent place in the history of country music. They were well received by the poultry people in Hershey with a standing ovation on the famous 'Elvira' song that is a trademark of the group. The group came back for an encore with "Bobby Sue".

Public Meetings Will Address New Water Runoff Rule

JAYNE SEBRIGHT
Lancaster Farming Staff

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Farmer, landowner, and forestry groups are concerned about revisions to the Clean Water Act proposed by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA). The Total Maximum Daily Load (TMDL) rule could affect more than 11.5 million acres of forestland and farmland in Pennsylvania.

In August, the EPA proposed the new rule to revise existing regulations for administering the Total Maximum Daily Load (TMDL) provisions of the Clean Water Act.

TMDLs are defined as the maximum amount of pollution a body of water can have while still maintaining a certain level of water quality. EPA established the revisions to the TMDL provisions after numerous lawsuits were filed against the agency in the late 1980's and 1990's.

According to farm organizations and forestry groups that have formed a coalition to combat the new rule, it is a very prescriptive and unnecessary remedy to fix a few minor problems.

"We're concerned that the EPA is overstepping its bounds," said Brenda Shambaugh, legislative director for the Pennsylvania State Grange. "The new revisions will give the EPA jurisdiction over all land, especially agriculture land."

As part of the TMDL revisions, agricultural and forestry operations now classified as nonpoint sources under the Clean Water Act are reclassified as point sources. Forestry, animal feeding operations, and aquatic production facilities will all be reclassified as point sources of water pollution. If these operations are classified as point sources, they may be required to get National Pollutant Discharge Elimination Service (NPDES) permits.

In the original Clean Water Act, point sources were limited to industrial sites, which usually contain pipe sources of discharge. These sources are required to obtain a prescriptive NPDES permit before operations begin.

"The EPA is taking the authority in deciding what should be classified as point and non-point sources of pollution," said Mary Wirth, public affairs director for Blue Triangle Hardwood in Everett. "Our coalition isn't even certain that the EPA has the legal authority to do this."

"Getting the NPDES permits could cost landowners $10,000," she said. "The permits are going to be very costly, and there are going to be delays. This new rule requires landowners to spend a lot of time and money on process, not prevention."

The Pennsylvania State Grange and Blue Triangle Hardwood, which is part of Rossi American Hardwood, are two of 35 organizations that have joined the coalition to combat EPA's new rule. The organizations include the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, Pennsylvania Landowners Association, Pennsylvania Livestock Association, and other private and public associations.

According to Wirth, the EPA is targeting industries that are very minor contributors to pollution.

"Silviculture (forest agriculture) ranks next to last as a water impairment source," said Wirth. "It's equal to only three miles of Pennsylvania's 87,000 miles of streams."

However, Tom Henry, who is the TMDL Program Manager for Region 3 of the EPA, claims that the new revisions will only affect those companies that are significant polluters to water.

"Once we determine the TMDLs for the water bodies, we will determine what operations are having significant impact on the load," said Henry, whose region includes Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Delaware, and the District of Columbia. "We have the option of pulling that particular operation into the NPDES permitting process."

According to Henry, the EPA will only require the NPDES permits on a case by case basis. "It is a last resort approach to controlling pollutants from siviculture," he said. "It is not meant to be industry wide. It is all based on existing controls, Best Management Practices (BMP), and the significance of the sources."

Although Henry acknowledges the concern of agriculture and forestry groups, he does contend that the EPA has been listening to these groups, at least at the federal level. "On May 1, the USDA and the EPA released a joint statement addressing these concerns."

In the joint statement, the two groups agree that states should take the lead in developing pollution budgets for impaired waterways. The agreement grants the states up to 15 years to develop TMDLs for the impaired waters. It also lengthens the time period for states to develop lists of impaired waters from two to four years.

However, in the paper, the USDA does express concerns that the EPA is moving away from "traditional notions of what is a nonpoint source of pollution and strategies for reducing impacts through voluntary efforts and Best Management Practices." Both the EPA and USDA agree that voluntary and incentive-based approaches are the best way to address nonpoint sources of pollution.

The paper also states that no NPDES permits will be required point sources, they may be required to get National Pollutant for point sources from forestry operations for five years from the final rule's publication. The EPA agrees to work with the USDA and the public for developing guidelines for states to following in developing and adopting forestry BMP programs for water quality protection.

"The whole purpose of the new regulations is to get water bodies to reach certain levels of quality," said Henry. "It's premature to say that all forestland and farmland would be affected by the TMDL permitting because we haven't determine the TMDLs yet. We also haven't determined whether the controls they have already voluntarily put into place resolve the problems."

Even if a farmer doesn't have timberland, animal feeding operations, or aquatic facilities, they could still be affected by the new rule.

"In the revisions, the EPA also gains authority to regulate nonpoint runoff sources," said Wirth. "'And reclassifying forestry and animal feeding operations to point sources sets a precedent for the EPA to reclassify any agriculture operation. Basically this new rule regulates

(Turn to Page A21)

Public Meetings Will Address New Water Runoff Rule

In addition to redesignating siviculture from nonpoint to point sources of pollution, the revisions gives the EPA the right to enforce regulations for both nonpoint and point sources of pollution if it feels that the state environmental protection departments are not meeting the conditions of the rule.

"These new revisions are not necessary because the state already has passed and implemented a number of agriculture/environmental laws to govern the agriculture industry," said Shambaugh. "The ag community has been one of the major driving forces in passing these laws, which benefit not only agriculture, but everyone."

Pennsylvania has a Nonpoint Source Management Program under the Clean Water Act that was approved by the EPA in 1992. The program is designed to control, prevent, and remedy nonpoint sources with regulations requiring erosion and sedimentation control plans for earth disturbances.

This program is administered by the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection and has been commended by the EPA for its design. It identifies BMP-based programs to regulate potential runoff problems.

"The new regulations severly hinder the agriculture industry without really benefitting anyone because we already have laws in place," said Shambaugh.

Henry maintains that the EPA will work with the states as much as possible. "It's only when the state fails to fulfill their obligations that we will step in," he said.

EPA's new Total Maximum Daily Load revisions are scheduled to be implemented in the summer of 2000. Since proposed, the rule has generated 30,000 public comments. Concerns about the revisions were also addressed in the May/June 2000 issue of the Farm Journal.

According to Wirth, nothing short of a public outcry will stop the new regulation from being implemented. "'We need enough people speaking out against the rule so that Congress will halt its implementation," said Wirth.

To address the new rule and get more people involved in stopping its implementation, the coalition will host two public meetings. The first is scheduled for Thursday, June 8, at the Casino at Lakemont Park in Altoona from 7 to 9 p.m. The second will be held at the Berks County Ag Center in Leesport on Thursday, June 15, from 7 to 9 p.m.

For more information about the public meetings, call Pat Wood at (717) 533-3423.

Adams County Ag Center Construction Finish Nears

JANET WILLIAMS
Adams Co. Correspondent

GETTYSBURG (Adams Co.) — The new Agricultural Center for Adams County is in the home stretch of construction.

The carpet is down, the office walls are going up, and the grading around the building is being done. It is still four to six weeks from being ready for occupancy but it gets a little closer each week.

Laurence V. Martick, district manager of the Adams County Conservation District, said the $3.6 million project would have never gotten off the ground if it had not been for the dedication of the Adams County commissioners and unwavering support of the members of the farming community.

The county commissioners set the stage by offering to lease 10.2 acres along Old Harrisburg Road to the Conservation District. The land (a parcel adjacent to Green Acres, the county nursing home, and the Adams County Prison) was leased to the conservation district for $1 a year for 25 years. The only condition was that the building should bring together all the government-funded agricultural agencies and organizations.

The way things are set up now, without a centralized building, a farmer who needs to do business with USDA, soil conservation, extension, or the county ag land preservation folks have to run to three different locations in and around Gettysburg. "It is extremely inefficient," Martick said.

With the commissioners guaranteeing the debt, the conservation district was able to get a mortgage and enter contracts with the federal, state, and county governments, which will be renting the space for their agencies. Many of those offices are in leased space which has no room for expansion. The lack of space is making it very difficult for some of those agencies to do their job.

Martick, for example, said he needs three new staff members and has the OK to hire. But he can't hire them until he has somewhere to put those people.

Harry Stoke, a county commissioner, said the county is also facing a serious space problem at the courthouse. "The courthouse is jammed to the hilt," he said. The commissioners recently rented space in town for the juvenile probation office but still needed more room. Moving the other offices to the Ag Center will allow them to expand other departments within the court house.

The new building is a sight to behold. From the outside, it resembles a barn, complete with fancy brickwork on the wall facing the east. The foyer is an expansive open space with open beams bolted together. A round red silo-like structure houses the elevator to the downstairs.

Nearly every office is bathed in natural light from the floor to ceiling windows on nearly every wall.

"We tried to include 'green technology' every way we could," Stoke said. As an example, he pointed to the chillers that are part of the air conditioning system. They will run during off-peak hours, at a lower rate of electricty, to make ice that will be stored in underground tanks. Air will be pumped over the ice, cooled, and then circulated throughout the building in the summer.

Penn State Cooperative Extension will occupy about one-fourth of the 32,000-square-foot building. William Kleiner, extension agent serving Adams County, said, "Agriculture is still the prime income producer here." Tourism, the second largest industry in the county, is a distant second.

Commissioner Thomas Weaver said the key to realizing the dream of the Ag Center was the commitment and involvement of every element in the community. He said donations came from private individuals, local companies, and many farm organizations.

Adams County National Bank pledged $40,000 and also gave the county such a competitive rate on the mortgage that a bond issue was not needed, Weaver said.

Faith Peterson, one of the co-chairs of the Capital Campaign Committee, said they began working in September 1998 and raised $350,000 of their $400,000 goal. "The response (from the community) was very positive," she said. "We're really excited about it. It's just going to be so nice to have all those things in one place."

Safaris Desiree has participated in caught her interest, she said. The 18- year-old daughter of Diane Shirk, Lititz, fell in love with exotic animals by visiting zoos all over the area. Desiree said she has visited the Philadelphia Zoo and zoos in Hershey, Washington, D.C., Baltimore, and many aquariums.

Desiree said that the polar bear exhibit at the Philadelphia Zoo appealed to her. "I spent a lot of time in Philly," she said. She watched "Yogi Bear" TV cartoons a lot. And she pointed to watching black bears at a family cabin in Snow Shoe.

Desiree also attributes her decision to watching a veterinarian help Nikki, a Gordon Setter, who passed away after her last litter.

Desiree wants to major in animal science at Delaware Valley College. Del Val appealed to her because of its animal science curriculum.

Scholarship recipient Ryan Wimer looked into several colleges. The 18-year-old son of Raymond Wimer, Quarryville, selected a career path in equine management and looked at several colleges.

Ryan believes that Del Val is too small and Penn State is too big. He finally chose the University of Delaware with the help of the company he has worked for several years, Hilltop Farms, Colora, Md., a "very well-to-do sport horse and breeding center," Ryan said.

Ryan will study animal science at the university with a focus on ag marketing. He'd like to manage his own horse farm someday.

Ryan helps on his own small family farm, which raises dairy heifers.

Scholarship recipient Lynn Ressler, 17, son of Leon and Lou Ann Ressler, Peach Bottom, has a "passion" for horticulture.

Lynn, senior at Solanco High School and 10-year Lancaster County 4-H Strawberry Club member, said he has "always been interested in plants." He spent some time trying to grow a Passion flower, but couldn't get the seeds to germinate.

Lynn noted the lack of germination could be blamed on improper heating. The flowers have to be kept at a temperature of 100 degrees for three weeks.

Lynn, who plans to enroll in Penn State to study horticulture, kept his focus on ornamental horticulture in high school and "took advanced everything," he said, with a focus on horticulture. He also studied Website design.

Audrey Nissley, 18, daughter of Mike and Nancy Nissley, Washington Boro, plans to return to the family farm or enter another ag-related business after graduation from Delaware Valley College.

Audrey, Manor FFA member, points to the inspiration provided by retired ag instructor August Birchler at Penn Manor.

"He picked me to go to the state Governor School to get the foundation to go to college," said Audrey. "He was really an influence. He told me to be the best I could be."

Audrey chose to study dairy science at Delaware Valley because the school was smaller and "I felt like more of a person," she said. Other schools were simply too big.

Audrey helps on her family's dairy, where they milk 75 cows.

Another scholarship winner, Russell Howard, chose a study in food science at Penn State.

Russell, 18, son of James and Cecilia Howard, Stasburg, requested a booklet from Penn State that peaked his interest.

The booklet explained the many job opportunities, with very high placement, for those studying food science.

At Lampeter Strasburg, Russell took many ag classes, including advanced courses. He wants to explore the various careers that could develop with the study of food science.

Lancaster Mennonite High School student Diana Erb took a careers assessment test as a junior in high school and found out a lot about her potential career possibilities.

Diana, 18, daughter of James and Romaine Erb, Lancaster, plans to study agribusiness at Penn State.

Diana helps with the family fruit and vegetable farm. The Lancaster Mennonite High School senior credits her school agriscience teachers for helping her with her career decision.

She helps at the family's roadside market and plans to use her education to help with the business. Diana said she'll be enrolling at the Penn State Berks Campus.

Berks County Dairy Farmer Crossbreeds To Prepare For Changes

milk through her system," he said. "We need cows who convert forage into milk efficiently."

Stoltzfus feeds his herd mainly high-quality forages, including round bale baleage. The cows are fed grain through a computerized feeder system.

Although Stoltzfus' Normandy crosses are still calves, he can already see some benefits of having them. "The first thing you notice is that these calves eat hay," he said. "A calf is born with two things in mind — getting on their feet and finding something to eat. The Normandy calves are very hardy."

Stoltzfus first found out about the Normandy dairy breed when his son visited a booth at the World Dairy Expo in Madison, Wisconsin.

"There were a lot of reasons I liked the breed," said Stoltzfus. "They average 4.5 percent fat and 4.0 percent protein. Their milk production averages around 15,000 pounds, but they can produce that with forage."

Another aspect of the breed that Stoltzfus liked was its longevity. "The Normandy breed averages eight to nine lactations, compared to other more traditional breeds that are averaging between two and four lactations."

Stoltzfus has had eight or nine calves born as Normandy - Holstein crosses. But only three of them were heifers. He only knows of one other farmer in the area who owns any Normandy animals, and those are also calves.

"The only Normandys milking in the states are beef and Normandy crosses," said Stoltzfus. "The dairy strand is still relatively new."

This is the first time that Stoltzfus has experimented with crossbreeding and with non-traditional dairy breeds.

"The Normandy breed has a terrific young sire program," said Stoltzfus. "They have a good sampling of young sires with better records than we do here in the states."

So far Stoltzfus is pleased with his Normandy calves. However, he said he can't be sure how much they will benefit the herd until they become cows.

"If you don't experiment and try new things, you're foolish," said Stoltzfus. "But then, if you do and it doesn't work, people will call you a fool. So you just have to go with your instincts."

Stoltzfus is hoping that his Normandy crossbreeds will help increase his component levels so that he is prepared for component pricing.

"It used to be that people didn't want high component levels and that the dairies took a lot of the components out of the milk," said Stoltzfus. "But now that trend is changing."

In Stoltzfus' opinion, fluid milk consumption has dropped during the past 20 years because the components that flavor the milk just weren't there any more.

"When we had all Guernsey, we used to have people come to our farm to get milk because it tasted better than store-bought milk," said Stoltzfus' wife Ruth. "Milk just doesn't taste as good with lower components."

Stoltzfus also believes that milk made with forage is more healthful than milk made by cows that are fed a lot of concentrates.

"A few weeks ago I read that conjugated linolenic acids or CLAs (fatty acids that are found in milk) can prevent against cancer, and that those CLAs are more prevalent in milk made with forage," said Stoltzfus. "I also heard that European butter (which is made from milk produced by cows fed primarily forage) has less saturated fats than butter made in America. Milk made with forage can be almost pharmaceutical."

Reading this information started Stoltzfus thinking. "I always knew that too much grain led to too many problems," said Stoltzfus, who claims he has very few twisted stomachs in his herd because of feeding forage. "A cow wasn't met to consume high levels of grain. She is a forage converter."

According to Stoltzfus, producing milk with forage is definitely to the average-sized farmer's advantage.

"The larger dairies have trouble raising enough forage to feed high amounts of it to their herd," said Stoltzfus. "But the smaller dairies can raise it on their own ground."

Stoltzfus predicts that some day the component levels in milk will be a major issue. "I didn't see any significant changes in my milk check when they converted to the new pricing system," said Stoltzfus. "But I do think they're moving in that direction (of paying more for high component levels.)"

Stoltzfus claims that too many consumers believe milk is fat. "If we want to increase per capita consumption, we're going to have to put the components back into the milk and sell the consumer on the idea that milk is protein."

Looking like an overly-speckled Holstein, the Normandy dairy cow originated from France and touts longevity, high milk component levels, and hardiness.

Only Two Weeks Left To Enter Dairy Recipe Drawing

Lancaster Farming salutes dairy farmers by holding an annual dairy recipe contest during June Dairy Month. The recipes remind us of all the wonderful dairy products available to produce culinary delights.

To enter the drawing, select your favorite recipe, which must include a substantial amount of at least one dairy product. Dairy ingredients include milk, cream, sour cream, whipped cream, butter, yogurt, buttermilk, dry milk, ice cream, and all hard and soft cheeses.

Please check your recipe ingredients carefully. Margarine and non-dairy substitutes such as whipped topping do not qualify as dairy products.

Dairy recipes are needed for appetizers, soups, breads, entrees, vegetables, desserts, beverages, snacks, and salads.

Clearly print or type your recipe entry. Be sure to give accurate measurements, temperatures, times, and sizes of baking dishes to use. We reserve the right to disqualify entries if these guidelines are not followed.

The difference between this contest and the weekly recipes is that you are asked to include a few paragraphs about yourself and your family. Although it is not required, a photograph of you or with your family adds a wonderful touch to accompany the printed submission. Photos will be returned if you write your name and address on the back of the picture.

Only one entry per family allowed. This contest is for adults who are 18-years-old or older, not children. Send your recipe, photo, and accompanying information with your complete address. If we do not have your complete mailing address, we cannot send your prize if you win.

Send entries immediately. Entries must be postmarked by June 1 to be eligible for the drawing. The state dairy princess and alternates will select the winners through a drawing. Recipe entries will be printed throughout the month of June. A list of the winning names will be printed in the July 1 issue.

Send entries to Lou Ann Good, Lancaster Farming Dairy Recipe Contest, P.O. Box 609, 1 E. Main St., Ephrata, PA 17522.

Foreign Companies Optimistic About China Joining WTO

HONG KONG — China's membership in the World Trade Organization (WTO) will bring important new opportunities for agricultural trade, executives of foreign companies say.

However, they caution the benefits will come gradually and bring painful adjustments to China's economy, which will raise political risk.

The opportunity to bypass government bureaucracy and directly serve flour mills, meat importers, or other Chinese customers is a major advantage, said an executive at an international agricultural trading company.

China, which has embarked on sweeping economic reforms, has been trying for the last 14 years to join the body which sets global trade rules and could clear the final hurdles this year.

Japanese trading company Itochu Hong Kong, which trades commodities and invests in supermarkets in China, is careful not to expect too much from China's WTO membership, said A. Nakajima, general manager for foodstuffs.

"It doesn't mean 1.3 billion people are going to be good consumers, ready to spend their money on everything," Nakajima said.

levels and that fluid consumption has been relatively flat. That means all the surplus milk will have to be processed into storable dairy products. That would imply that production of dairy products the first quarter of this year should be well above year ago levels.

Total production of cheese in March was just 2.6 percent greater than the same month a year ago. Cumulative production of cheese, however, was 6.4 percent ahead of the same quarter a year ago. American cheese production in March was 0.1 percent below a year ago. Cumulative production of American cheese, however, was 5.6 percent ahead of the same quarter a year ago. And March production of butter was 0.9 percent below a year ago.

Cumulative production of butter was 6.2 percent ahead of the same quarter a year ago.

The point is, the March numbers can be a bit misleading because dairy product production in March 1999 was well ahead of the same month in 1998.

Production of dairy products on a quarterly basis, however, reveals strong growth in the production of butter and cheese.

Dairy prices at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange have been relatively stable this week. Barrels traded between $1.0975 - $1.10 per pound. Blocks were $1.10 - $1.11 per pound. And butter was stable at $1.1950 per pound.

Market analysts are still surprised that butter is showing such strength. This is particularly true since cumulative butter production so far this year was up 6.2 percent through March. Someone must be buying butter!

And finally, it is still a bit surprising to see what is happening with the weekly NASS survey prices, particularly for block cheese. On May 6, for example, the price of block cheese in Minnesota and Wisconsin was $1.1348 per pound, whereas the same price for "Other States" was $1.0776. Theweighted average of these two figures--and the one that goes into the computation of federal order prices--was $1.0897. This figure is below the support price of $1.10 per pound for block cheese. It may explain a small= part of the reason the Class III price in April was $9.41 per cwt, below the milk support price of $9.80 per cwt at 3.5 percent butterfat. The Class III price in April would have been higher had the Minnesota/Wisconsin block cheese price been used instead of a national average. Clearly this should be revisited since it directly affects the price of protein and hence class prices under federal order reform.

For more information on market and federal order data, see my Penn State Dairy Outlook website at http://www.aers.psu.edu/dairyoutlook/.

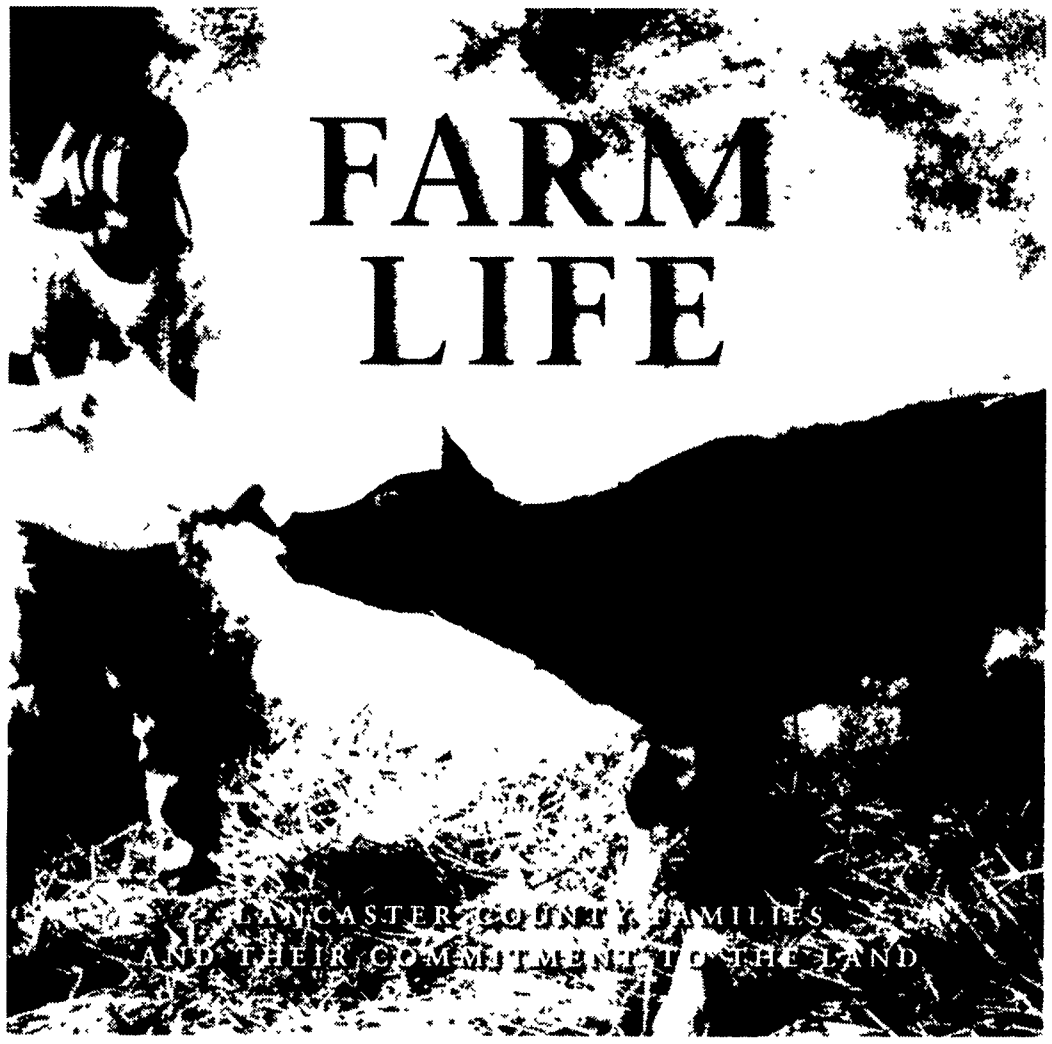
Book Presents "New Chapter" In Farmland Preservation

To raise the awareness of the cause of the Lancaster Farmland Trust, they have written and produced a book about seven families who have permanently preserved their farms The book captures the essence of what farming means to Lancaster County, to its people, and to the rest of the world, and why preservation is so important Through rich images and words, this 150-page book depicts the lives and work of these farmers as they relate to land, history of the generation's hopes and concerns for the future Through life-on-the-farm philosophies, the book puts names and faces on the work of the Trust



Entitled· Farm Life, Lancaster County Families And Their Commitment To The Land, the 9" x 9" book features these families Jeff and Sue Frey, Willowstreet, Bob and Deb Wenger, Quarryville; Clair and Mim Miller, Elizabethtown; Frank Ludwig, New Holland; Marty and Judy Greenleaf, Kirkwood, Terry and Sandy Scheets, Stevens; and an Amish farmer for whom a pseudonym is used at his request

The farms range in size from 54 acres (Ludwig) to 240 acres (Wenger). In most cases, the farms have belonged to the families for generations. For example, Bob Wenger's farm has belonged to his family for 86 years. Terry Scheetz's family has owned their farm for 90 years, and Clair Miller's farm has been their family for 150 years

The farmers tend various crops and livestock Clair Miller runs a dairy farm Jeff Frey grows corn and soybeans Terry Scheetz has a pig-roasting business and raises pheasants. Marty and Judy Greenleaf grow corn and soybeans Bob Wenger, Frank Ludwig and the Amish farmer are retired if there is such a thing for a farmer.

In each family, the wife contributes greatly. All raised or are raising children, and many have businesses as well. For instance Sue Frey has her own green houses behind their home where she sells flowers wholesale Mim Miller is a manager for a basket company and she works from a summer kitchen converted to an office The Amish farmer's wife runs a canning business and uses vegetables and fruits from her own garden and trees Sandy Scheetz has her own framery and art gallery in Ephrata and she has converted a tobacco barn on the farm as her framing studio Judy Greenleaf takes a very active role in the farming itself as a partner to her husband

In each case, the farmers and their wives are dedicated to the land Even with the financial ups and downs that come with farming, these families have turned down substantial offers from developers rather choosing instead to preserve the land for farming

The book has been written, photographed, designed, and published by Lancaster County natives and businesses. The writer, Sara Barton, writes for the Lancaster New Era and is a graduate of Manheim Township High School and Carnegie Mellon University, Pittsburgh.

Gini Wagner is a full-time commercial photographer with Godfrey Advertising As an active board member of the Lancaster Farmland Trust, she dedicates much of her free time to the efforts of preserving farmland. This is her first published photographic work.

Dave Loose and Kristy Tunnell at DLD Advertising have designed the book.

A private reception in support of the book project, to preview the book design, and meet the families featured in the book, is scheduled for Monday evening from 5 to 7 p.m. at the Pressroom Restaurant in Lancaster.

Protein and Energy for the Transition Cow

Gabriella A. Varga & Jennifer Vallimont

There is a six-week window of time during a dairy cow's lactation cycle that is crucial to a successful lactation. What happens during these six weeks can determine the health of the cow and how much milk she will contribute to the bulk tank The most important part about this window of time, the transition period, is that producers have control over what happens.

The transition period for dairy cows is commonly defined as the last three weeks prior to calving through the first three weeks after calving Many changes are occurring in the cow, including hormonal changes in preparation for calving, increased nutrient demand for milk synthesis, rapid fetal growth, and changes in her environment and interactions with peer groups. These changes, in addition to many others, can result in decreased dry matter intake as cows approach their calving date, however the cow's nutrient demands increase during the last few weeks of gestation. The dry cow not only has requirements to maintain her body but also the growth and development of the fetus and udder, body growth in heifers, and colostrum or milk synthesis. This is why it is so important to provide the proper balance of nutrients to the close-up dry cow. The key to ensuring that the cow gets the proper balance of nutrients is to provide a ration that will maximize rumen microbial protein synthesis, and meet the protein needs of the fetus, mammary gland, and maintenance of the dam. We have shown that as the dam approaches calving, the relationship becomes stronger between dry matter intake prior to calving and the amount of dry matter the cow will consume after calving The higher the dry matter intake prepartum, the higher it is postpartum. One benefit that would go along with increased pre- and postpartum dry matter intake is a potential decrease in postpartum metabolic diseases. These diseases can cost from $150-300 per case.

The current protein recommendation by the National Research Council (NRC, 1989) for maintenance and gestation of the dry cow is 12% crude protein (CP) on a dry matter basis. Some researchers have thought that this value may be too low, resulting in a loss of maternal protein reserves. In contrast, at Penn State we have shown that cows remained in positive protein balance when consuming rations containing 10.6%, 12.7%, or 14.5% CP. A more recent study by the same Penn State group found that cows fed a ration with 17.8% CP during the last four weeks prior to freshening tended to eat less dry matter and produce less milk after calving than cows fed a ration containing 13.3% CP. A ration that provides 12% CP might be adequate if cows did not reduce their dry matter intake during the late dry period. Most cows decrease their intake by as much as 30% in the last three weeks prior to calving. Because of this decreased intake prior to calving and if first calf heifers are in this dry group, it is beneficial to have a higher protein concentration in the diet, therefore we recommend 14% CP.

Forage testing can help both the producer and nutritionist evaluate dry cow rations more effectively. The quality and availability of the protein that is provided determine the effect that an increase in crude protein level may have in a herd. The protein source is also important because the microorganisms need adequate degradable protein, we recommend that the degradable protein be between 8.8 to 9% of ration dry matter (63-65% of the crude protein).

Energy is another important nutrient for dry cows Close-up dry cows are usually fed a ration that contains at least 60-65% forage on a dry matter basis In most cases, once a cow freshens that diet changes to a higher concentrate ration It takes the rumen a few weeks to adapt to this higher grain ration. There may be benefits to providing the close-up dry cow a diet that is high in fermentable carbohydrates with additional concentrate. This type of diet can potentially increase the availability of carbohydrates to the rumen (which stimulates rumen microbial protein synthesis), prepare the rumen microbes for the lactation diet, promote rumen papillae development, and increase the absorptive capacity of the rumen.

A 1999 study by Dann and others at Penn State evaluated the effects of increasing rumen available carbohydrate to transition cows. Cows that were fed a diet with steam flaked corn had higher dry matter intake and lower non-esterified fatty acids (an indicator of body fat mobilization) prepartum and higher milk production postpartum than cows fed cracked corn. The increased energy from the steam flaked corn illustrates the potential benefits of altering the carbohydrate source in the ration. It is important to work with a good nutritionist and monitor forage quality when formulating dry cow rations. In this close-up dry period when the cows are consuming less dry matter, we recommend that the energy density of the total ration be between 0.68 - 0.73 Mcal NEl/lb dry matter, and nonfiber carbohydrate be between 33-38% in ration dry matter.

It is challenging to make recommendations for the close-up dry cow because we don't know with certainty which cows will calve early and which ones will calve late. If the elevated energy density in the diet of 0.68 to 0.73 Mcal NEl/lb was fed to cows with body condition scores greater than 3.5 on a 5-point scale throughout the entire dry period, then those cows may become too fat. We know fat cows tend to have more difficult calvings and are more prone to metabolic diseases such as retained placenta and ketosis post calving. Studies conducted at Penn State have shown that dry cows with body condition scores greater than 3.5 also lose more body condition after calving, stay in negative energy balance longer, and produce less milk than cows calving with a body condition score less than 3.5.

The question that challenges nutritionists is what energy level to formulate for in small herds since it is probably not possible to feed for two dry cow groups. In order to prevent fat dry cows, evaluate body condition score 30-60 days prior to dry off and make nutritional changes at this time, especially if many overweight cows are observed. Work with a nutritionist to determine an energy level that is going to meet the needs of the average dry cow in the herd. For your close-up dry cows, consider a top dress of additional concentrate to increase the protein and energy they consume and to prepare the rumen and the cow for the lactation diet. It is also important to pay attention to vitamins and minerals since they are important in the prevention some of the postpartum metabolic problems that fresh cows encounter.

Fresh cows need some additional attention as well. They should be offered a diet that is intermediate between the close-up and high cow rations with no greater than a 10% difference in any one nutrient. Three to five pounds of good quality hay for the first week after calving should be fed to assure good rumen function. Remember that heifers are still growing and need additional nutrients to support that growth. Never leave the feed bunk empty in front of your fresh cows. They should have all of the feed that they can eat.

Compost Grass, Leaves, Plant Wastes To Improve Garden

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Composting allows home gardeners to recycle organic material into a useful gardening product.

"Leaves, plants killed by frost, vegetable scraps, and grass clippings — all these materials can be composted," said Robert Nuss, professor of ornamental horticulture in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. "You can operate a compost pile year-round. The composting process will continue through the coldest days of winter."

Nearly 30 percent of the material homeowners throw away can be composted. This keeps these wastes out of landfills and creates a product that adds valuable organic matter to the lawn and garden. "Many landfills no longer accept leaves or garden wastes," said Nuss. "Composting may be the easiest way for homeowners to dispose of them."

Composting decomposes organic matter into a dark, crumbly material similar to humus. Along with providing nutrients, finished compost helps soil retain water by increasing its organic content.

"Compost is a valuable soil conditioner that can be used in gardens, around trees, and on lawns," said Nuss.

"You don't need a special compost bin, but unconfined heaps can be visually offensive to neighbors," Nuss said. "If you have neighbors living close by, you may want to consider using a compost bin. Other than that, you need few tools except for a manure or garden spading fork for turning the material, and a soil thermometer."

Composting tools and bins are available at hardware stores and garden centers, or you can order them from gardening catalogs. An inexpensive bin can be made from masonry blocks, boards, wire, or snow fencing. "Make sure your bin is at least three feet high and three feet wide, so that it can hold enough material to function properly," said Nuss.

Once you have your bin situated on level ground, you can fill it with plant and vegetable scraps, egg shells, coffee grounds, sawdust — even small bits of paper.

The pile should contain a mix of carbon- and nitrogen-rich materials because both are essential for the microorganisms that do the decomposing. "Green, leafy wastes usually are high in nitrogen, while woody materials tend to be high in carbon," Nuss said. "Fertilizer and manure also are good nitrogen sources."

The microorganisms that aid in composting need some moisture, so you may need to water the pile from time to time. One way to gauge moisture is the squeeze test. "Tightly squeeze a handful of the material," Nuss said. "If a few droplets of water come out, it's just about right. If it looks and feels dry as a bone, hose down the compost pile."

Decomposition without oxygen can cause bad odors, so turn the pile every few weeks with a gardening fork to aerate it. Using a fair amount of coarse material — dry leaves or bulky plants, for instance — also helps ensure that the pile gets proper aeration. If you detect any odor, turn the pile.

Complete information about starting a home compost pile is available in "Composting to Reduce the Waste Stream: A Guide to Small-Scale Food and Yard Waste Composting," a 48-page publication featuring easy-to-read charts and guidelines.

Copies of the guide are available for $8 from the College of Agricultural Sciences Publications Distribution Center. For ordering information, call (814) 865-6713 or visit the college's publications Web site at pubs-.cas.psu.edu. To order using Mastercard or Visa, call toll-free, (877) 345-0691.

Researchers Use Constructed Wetlands To Reduce Odors

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Feces, urine, and wastewater that are by-products of hog farms smell to high heaven.

To reduce the odors, two researchers in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences have found that low-tech, constructed wetlands work well to clear the air.

Field trials in small-scale, constructed wetlands in a greenhouse showed an 80 percent reduction in offensive odor compounds from unadulterated swine facility wastewater, said Eileen Wheeler, assistant professor of agricultural engineering. Wheeler and doctoral researcher Susan Wood sought to confirm anecdotal evidence that water treatment in a constructed wetland can reduce odors.

"Swine and other livestock producers in southern states have used constructed wetlands to treat animal waste, and researchers had noticed that smells were not as strong," Wheeler explained.

"We wanted to see if we could quantify a reduction in odor in trials that would reflect real-world practices."

Wood, of Batavia, N.Y., constructed eight experimental wetlands in 100-gallon livestock tanks. She filled the tanks with gravel, added a layer of peat moss, and planted a commercial wetlands seed mix containing a wide variety of plants, including fescue, redtop, and wild rye. She also tested unplanted wetlands containing just gravel.

"Some of the grasses died where the water entered the wetlands," Wood said. "But in general, the planted wetlands effectively reduced odors."

Wood organized eight volunteers in a sensory odor panel that compared air samples from untreated swine wastewater and water that had been treated in the wetlands. The panel rated air samples on an odor scale of 0 to 5, with 5 being the most offensive.

"Most of the untreated samples were rated as a 4, and the samples from wetland treatment had an average rating of 1," she said. "The water that had been through the wetland had a stagnant, earthy smell, but it wasn't offensive."

Wheeler said Wood's research is focused on finding an alternative to other methods of treating swine waste for odor reduction. Current swine waste treatment practices include:

- Mechanical aeration of manure lagoons. Oxygen is bubbled into the wastewater, preventing anaerobic conditions that produce smells. "However, this technology has large power requirements that results in high energy costs," Wheeler said.
- Anaerobic digestion of wastes into biogas. This method requires expensive investment in equipment and high maintenance costs.
- Chemical or biological additives that counteract smells. Research has indicated that the effectiveness of most additives has been questionable.

The next step in Wheeler's research is to construct a large wetlands treatment facility on a local hog operation. If the larger wetland continues to effectively reduce odors, the researchers then will focus on whether it is economically feasible to use treatment wetlands on commercial farms.

The researchers also want to test how the wetlands function under different temperature conditions.

"The constructed treatment wetlands that have been built in the South have warmer weather year-round," Wood explained. "We would like to see how these wetlands function during a Pennsylvania winter, or whether some kind of protective structure is required to keep them working."

Wheeler said swine operations can use the treated water as wash water for hosing out hog pens, or they may be able to store the water for use as fertilizer for crops.

Maryland To Host National 4-H Youth Tech Conference

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Maryland's reputation in computer technology has resulted in the first-ever National 4-H Tech Conference scheduled July 8-12 on the University of Maryland campus at College Park.

Teams of three to five youth with their adult leaders from all 50 states are expected to attend the July event. Computer laboratories in the university's nationally known AT & T Teaching Theatre, several campus lecture halls, and the Animal Sciences-Agricultural Engineering complex will be utilized for hands-on advanced training. Participants will be housed in a campus dormitory.

A 12-member planning committee/design team-half of whom are older teen-age members of state 4-H youth technology leadership teams-met recently at the Maryland 4-H Center in College Park to iron out final arrangements.

Participating youth team members from Maryland are Alicia Rausch of Laurel, Kristen Fitzpatrick of LaPlata, and Shelley M. Armour of Joppatowne, Armour is a general agriculture sophomore at the University of Maryland.

Other youth planning team members hail from Kansas, Virginia, and California. That list includes Andrew Bell of Lincoln, Kan.; Beverly Beasley of Stuart, Va.; Anna Calasanti-Laws of Blacksburg, Va.; and Steven Worker of Santa Maria, Calif.

They will be assisted by several adult 4-H professional workers and volunteers, including Richard A. Byrne, Marie Fredette, and Kendra B. Wells of the Maryland Cooperative Extension 4-H youth development state office in College Park.

Other adult advisers are Kevin Wentzel of San Jose, Calif.; Peter Laws of Blacksburg, Va.; and Trudy Dunham of St. Paul, Minn.

Wentzel is a volunteer leader with the California 4-H Technology Corps.; Laws is a state extension 4-H youth specialist at Virginia Tech,; and Dunham is the University of Minnesota coordinator for CYFERNet, a national web-based computer network for land-grant universities, extension educators, and the USDA's Cooperative State Research, Education and Extension Service (CSREES).

Also serving as consultants are Virginia Gobeli, national 4-H program leader, and Thomas G. Tate, a national program leader in information technology. Both work for the USDA-CSREES headquarters office in Washington, D.C.

The Federal Health Care Finance Administration, based in Baltimore, is a cooperating agency. It is interested in the concept of computer-literate youth helping senior citizens and disabled persons get "online."

Organizers hope that the National 4-H Technology Conference will be a catalyst enabling states to share, obtain and create information while building networks for sharing of new ideas.

Registration information for the conference is available online at http://ca4h.org/4hntc. The e-mail address is 4hntc@4-h.org.

Northeast Order Uniform Price For April 2000

BOSTON, MA — Erik F. Rasmussen, Market Administrator for the Northeast Marketing Area, has announced that the statistical uniform price for April 2000 is $12.46 per hundredweight or $1.07 per gallon for milk delivered to plants located in Suffolk County, MA (Boston).

The statistical uniform price is the benchmark minimum producer blend price paid to dairy farmers, prior to allowable deductions, for milk containing 3.5 percent butterfat, 2.99 percent protein, and 5.69 percent other solids. The price received by an individual dairy farmer will vary as the component composition of a farm's milk differs from the established benchmarks.

Milk receipts from producers totaled 2.091 billion pounds. Class I utilization, milk processed as beverage milk, was 39.0 percent of producer milk receipts. The average Class I utilization, for the three predecessor orders that were combined to form the Northeast Order, was 40.2 percent in April 1999.

The manufacture of Class II products such as cream, ice cream, yogurt, and cottage cheese utilized 17.4 percent of producer milk. Milk used to manufacture Class III products such as cheese (American and Italian) and evaporated condensed products utilized 30.2 percent of total milk receipts. Class IV usage (butter, nonfat and whole milk powder) equaled 13.4 percent of the total.

Rasmussen also stated that the producer price differential (PPD) for April is $3.05 per hundredweight for milk delivered to plants located in Suffolk County, MA. The PPD represents each producer's share of the value generated by the marketwide pool on a hundredweight basis.

The PPD, which is added to the payment producers receive for their milk's components, is adjusted for the location of the receiving plant. The statistical uniform price and PPD decrease by scheduled amounts the more distant the plant is from Suffolk County, MA. The April PPD is $2.95 in New York NY, and $2.85 in Philadelphia, PA.

The Class prices for milk pooled in April are as follows: Class I, $14.18 (Suffolk County, MA); Class II, $12.10; Class III, $9.41; and Class IV, $11.38. Had the Northeast Order been in effect in 1999, comparable class prices for April 1999 would have been: Class I $16.00, Class II $12.05, Class III $11.64, and Class IV price $11.26. The component values for April are protein, $1.7399 per pound; butterfat, $1.1352 per pound; other solids, $0.0408 per pound; and nonfat solids, $0.8537 per pound.

State Farm Leader Calls On Congress To Vote In Favor Of China Trade

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.)—Pennsylvania Farm Bureau (PFB) President Guy Donaldson, Orrtanna, went to Washington, D.C. recently to urge the House of Representatives to vote in favor of permanent normal trade relations with China. By all accounts, the vote in the House, scheduled for the week of May 22, will be extremely close.

"The vote for permanent normal trade relations is about trade, pure and simple. Some critics of the agreement want to fold China's record on human rights and labor issues into the discussion. What the debate boils down to is ensuring that when China becomes a World Trade Organization member, U.S. farmers are able to secure their place in a market that could be worth more than $3 billion within one year of China's accession to the 136-member organization," said Donaldson.

If the vote for permanent normal trade relations passes, there are benefits for many of Pennsylvania's agriculture commodities. The beef industry projects that income growth and a rising demand from China's urban centers will significantly increase the demand for beef.

China consumes far more pork than any other country, so the pork industry expects increased demand for their products. The poultry industry will continue to benefit from trade with China, which already is the second leading market for poultry product exports. There will be no quantity limits for these products. China has agreed to accept all beef and pork from the U.S. that is certified wholesome by USDA.

Additionally, the dairy industry and the grain industry will reap benefits if the trade agreement is signed.

While in Washington, Donaldson, along with PFB's dairy specialist Joel Rotz, will be meeting with the Pennsylvania delegation of legislators to discuss the benefits of the permanent normal trade status.

"If Congress does not grant permanent normal trade relations to China, the relationship with our fourth largest trading partner could be in serious jeopardy. As a World Trade Organization member, China would look to the European Union and other foreign outlets, instead of the U.S. for farm products to fill their pantries and supermarket shelves," Donaldson said.

Improved trade relations with China will mean more than just economic benefits for the U.S. Having China in the WTO will further the rule of law within the country and compel China to follow the rules established by the WTO countries, including the U.S. For the Chinese people, this agreement will certainly lead to increased economic and political freedoms. Trade liberalization is more than money and markets. It encourages an exchange of ideas and standards that can lead to more rewarding civic institutions and rewarded citizens.

House Ag Committee Wraps Up Field Hearings

PEORIA, Ill.—This week, the House Agriculture Committee, led by Chairman Larry Combest (R-TX), completed the final two farm policy field hearings in a series of 10.

With the two most recent hearings in Boise, Idaho and Peoria, Illinois, the Agriculture Committee has visited every region in the U.S. and heard the views of 181 producers who testified before the panels.

"During this series, we've heard from hundreds of producers from all over America. With so many different experiences and differing perspectives, we didn't find a clear consensus on how we should change federal farm policy," said Combest. "Still, I believe that American producers know we're listening to them and that we have their confidence in pursuing policies meant to ensure their future prosperity."

While there was disagreement among producers regarding a number of policy issues, witnesses did consistently cite the increased cost of regulations, unfair foreign trade practices, and low prices as some of the obstacles American farmers and ranchers need to overcome.

Program Launched To Support Equine Program At Delaware Valley College

DOYLESTOWN (Bucks Co.) — Expanding on the college's philosophy of providing the finest possible practical education, the equine program at Delaware Valley College announced the creation of "Friends of Equine," a group that will help identify sources of financial support to the college's growing Equestrian Center.

"The Delaware Valley College Equestrian Center plays an important part of the academic program at Delaware Valley College," said Karin Glassman, director of equine science.

"Unlike most traditional educational units, the Delaware Valley College Equine Science program must maintain an unusual operating budget," Glassman said. "As a tuition-driven private institution, funding capital projects is a challenge. Additional sources of financial support are essential to underwrite the extraordinary costs involved with improving and maintaining the facility."

Maintaining an exemplary equestrian center is vital not only to the continued success of the equine science program, but also to the regional equestrian community, Glassman said. The equestrian center hosts shows, clinics, demonstrations, and seminars open to the public.

"Most importantly, by creating a more competitive, vibrant, updated facility, the college will be better prepared to meet the needs of future generations of young equestrians," she said.

The extensive on-campus training facility includes the equestrian center, a beautiful 84 x 280 foot indoor arena with elevated viewing area and attached stabling for 48 horses, a 120 x 90 foot outdoor jumping arena, a round pen, separate hay barn, and paddocks for ample turnout. Surrounding the equestrian center are acres of pastures, farmland, and cross-country trails.

The equine science program emphasizes hands-on practical application of the skills expected by employers in the equine industry. Students take part in equestrian center operations, acquiring basic skills in horse care and stable management. The DelVal Equestrian Center is recognized by the British Horse Society as an Official Approved Riding Establishment.

Individuals may contribute to Friends of Equine through many levels of giving. In the Adopt-A-Horse program, one can participate in the "Hall of Fame," "Saddle Up Club," or "Stable Companions." Through the exhibitor program, one can contribute at the First Year Green, Second Year Green, Grand Prix, or Gold Medalist levels.

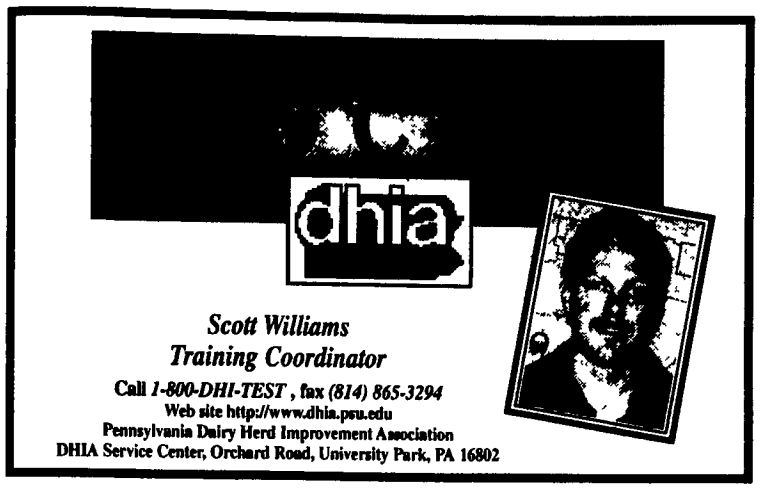
THE LEADER IN THE FIELD



Question: What is the correct moisture level for our TMR? Will moisture levels affect sorting? How can we tell if sorting is going on?

If a person had to pick one fault in TMR feeding, it would have to do with feed particle sorting. The fact that we need to process grains so that our cows can maximize their usage leads to enormous differences in particle sizes in a TMR. Add the concept of maintaining forage length to enhance rumen health and we expand these differences. The key is to reach for some compromise.

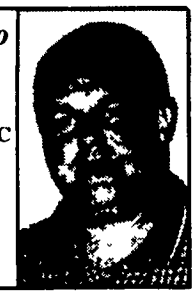
As for the first question, I see growing concern about proper moisture levels in TMRs. Sorting is not the only problem we face when a TMR is too dry. Palatability also appears to diminish when the feed is dry. As a rule of thumb, I have often seen improvement in cow performance when moisture levels were at a minimum of 52%. There are a lot of variables that could be considered but these might lead to some confusion Allow your cows to tell you what they prefer simply by making a moisture change and measuring the change in intake. Make sure your calculations are in dry matter or else increases that are only in the water portion of the feed might fool you. For example: cows consuming 48# dry matter at a ration moisture level of 50% are eating 96# total feed [48 / (100-50)] x 100 = 96 # fed. Change the diet to 52% moisture [48 / (100-52)] x 100 =100# fed. We would need to add four pounds water to each portion that we are mixing to increase the moisture from 50% to 52%. You should also keep in mind that, although seemingly simple, moisture changes are feed changes and should be done gradually to minimize stress.

Will moisture levels affect sorting? Cows are very capable at getting to what they prefer even in a TMR I watch in amazement at their ability to sort and wonder how they do it with such large muzzles They have all the appearances of being made to eat quickly with no ability at discretion I then look at the beginning and end feeds of a feeding period and see two distinctly different TMRs. Particle size measurement boxes can be used if you do not trust your eyes, but you will see the same result. The balanced diet that we so carefully prepared is not the same diet that our cows are eating. Dry diets seem to allow more sorting than wetter ones. We are trying to cause the finer particles of our TMR to stick to the coarser ones by adding moisture. Other feed products such as molasses and oils can also be used to create this tackiness Water is certainly the cheapest to add and may accomplish the desired effect

We already talked about physical observations and measurements that can be used to determine if we are experiencing sorting Another way that I find

Dairyman To Dairyman

GEORGE CUDOC
PA DHIA Consulting Dairyman



useful is to look at DHIA records MUN typically is thought to allow our cows to tell us if protein to carbohydrate balance is correct. MUN can also tell us about feeding management In this case I would like to show how MUN could be used to measure the possibility that all cows are not eating the same diet. From the Pa. DHIA Nitrogen Management Report I looked at the following

This is a herd that is fed a single TMR to all cows in the

Devon Horse Show, Fair May 25-June 3

DEVON (Chester Co.) — Top American riders who are international stars will be showing at the Devon Horse Show and Country Fair, May 25-June 3.

From their ranks will probably come the four-man team that will represent the U.S. in show jumping at the Sydney Olympics this fall.

All four members of the 1996 Atlanta Olympics silver medal team — Leslie Howard, Anne Kursinski, Peter Leone, and Michael Matz — will compete in the Dixon Oval. So will all four members of the 1999 Winnipeg Pan American silver medal team — Margie Goldstein-Engle, Alison Firestone, Howard, and Peter Wylde.

Also competing will be McLain Ward, who missed last year's Pan American team but is aiming all his top horses toward the selection trials for Sydney.

The first series of selection trials take place at the U.S. Equestrian Team's headquarters in Gladstone, N.J., on June 21, 23, and 25. The top 12 riders from those trials will travel to San Juan Capistrano, Calif., for the final trials, Aug. 2, 4, and 6. The team of four plus an alternate will fly to Sydney for Olympic competition on Sept. 25 and 28 and Oct. 1.

Equestrian sports are one of only a few in which males and females compete against each other on even terms. There are three equestrian disciplines featured at the olympics — show jumping, dressage, and eventing.

Equestrian sports are also one of only a very few in which top stars can continue to compete and win for many years.

Matz of Collegeville rode in his first games in 1976, then won a place on the 1992 team for the Barcelona Olympics. His finest hour came in Atlanta in 1996, 20 years after his first appearance in the Olympics, where he was a member of the silver medal team and then had the honor of carrying his nation's flag in the closing ceremonies.

Matz is trying to win his way onto this year's olympic team with Judgment, owned and bred by Mary Alice Malone's Iron Spring Farm in Coatesville.

Kursinski of Frenchtown, N.J., was an alternate on the 1984 Los Angeles gold medal winning team, a member of the 1990 Barcelona team, and a member of two silver medal teams, in Seoul in 1988 and in Atlanta in 1996. She and her top mount, Eros, won the American Gold Cup at the Devon show grounds in 1994 as well as placing third the same year in the Grand Prix of Devon.

Howard was a member of the gold medal Los Angeles and the silver medal Atlanta Olympic teams as well as last year's silver medal Pan American team.

Howard of Fairfield, Conn., is always a leading contender at Devon and has won the leading rider award there twice.

Ward, who was the 1999 leading jumper rider at Devon, is trying to make his first Olympic team. He will show all three horses that he is taking to the selection trials, last year's Grand Prix of Devon winner, Twist Du Valon, as well as Galileo and Rio.

Firestone, along with her silver medal from Winnipeg, was the highest placed American at the 1998 Rome World Championships.

Margie Goldstein-Engle, another silver team medalist in Winnipeg, most recently won the American Grandprix Association Leading Rider Award.

Peter Leone and Peter Wylde are both contenders to watch.

The Devon Horse Show and Country Fair benefits the Bryn Mawr Hospital, and has donated more than $9.5 million to the hospital in the past four decades.

The country fair, open daily, offers sporting clothes, fine prints and paintings, beautiful gold and silver jewelry and antiques.

General admission is $6 for adults, $3 for children under 12, and $4 for senior over 65. Reserved seating is available. Call for ticket prices. The ticket office is open Monday, Wednesday and Friday, 10 a.m. - 3 p.m. Tickets may be purchased in advance at the ticket office at the show grounds or call 610-688-2554.

Anne Kursinski, an Atlanta Olympic silver medalist with Eros who will be trying for a place at the Sydney Olympics, is one of the top stars competing at the Devon Horse Show and Country Fair.

herd We would expect, that even though there are differences in dry matter intakes as well as production levels, that the MUN to be within a range of plus or minus 6 from the average. The April and the February DHIA information shows that we stray from the normal expected range Through cooperation with the nutritionist we tracked the diets that were fed during each of these months and found an interesting trend The two months that showed high MUNs above the plus 6 from the average also were months that the moisture of the TMR dropped to 46% for February and 47% for April The other three months ranged from 51% to 54% moisture. We now suspect that low moisture levels in the TMR led to greater sorting and therefore more cows ate a diet that was different than the target This showed up as greater than expected ranges for the MUN measurements taken on test day

On this farm we now have included one other nutrient to balance - moisture We plan on using MUN as well as physical observations to measure if this feeding management change is working

Dairy Collectors, Divco Trucks, Cream Separator Convention Set

GRANTVILLE (Dauphin Co.) — The joint convention of the National Association of Milk Bottle Collectors (NAMBC), the Divco Club of America and the Cream Separator Association will be the first and largest gathering of dairy related collectors ever to be held. The event starts the celebration of "June is Dairy Month" and will be held on June 1, 2, 3 and 4 at the Holiday Inn in Grantville.

Celebrating its 20th year, NAMBC will feature numerous displays, among them "The Historical Cream of the Crop", Borden Co. go-withs and a 50 state collection of milk bottles. In addition to the displays, most of the many participants' rooms will be transformed into bottle shops guaranteed to foster a considerable amount of fellowship, buying, selling and trading of milk bottles and other dairy collectibles.

Featured also is a bus trip to the famous Turkey Hill Farms, a visit from the Purple Cow providing photo opportunities, the annual auction and banquet events. The Pennsylvania Dairy Princess will be on hand to assist the ice cream "scoopers" at the 'sundae on Saturday' event. A postal sub-station featuring a special cachet of the event, book signings of recent publications and the sale of related merchandise including toy Divco trucks by Ertle Co. will all be part of the program. A special commemorative bottle produced by the Stanpac Manufacturing Company, providing individual club recognition panels and the event, will be made available to all registrants.

The biggest display of Divco trucks ever to be assembled, showing some 25+ trucks of varied years, models and styles, will provide viewing of some of the finest examples of a by-gone era. Featured among the club trucks will be the extraordinary "Milk Shaker." It is hoped that a truck from each model year will be present. Conventioneers will be treated to a truck rodeo, a wonderful luncheon and a swap meet in a large tent shared by the Cream Separator gathering at the hotel. An outdoor barbecue is also planned.

Numerous Cream Separate Club displays with some most unusual and rare pieces will also be on exhibit. They will host a swap meet as well.

This is sure to be the nation's largest ever gathering of dairy and Divco truck afficionados. The event will provide a wonderful opportunity for members of all three organizations to reminisce and share their experiences.

Event organizers may be contacted for additional information. They are:

Lucas Attends State Beef Council Director Orientation

DENVER, Colo. — David Lucas, a veal grower from Bernville, Pa. took part in a State Beef Council Director Orientation Session at the National Cattlemen's Beef Association's (NCBA) Denver office April 19-20.

Lucas attended the session to learn about current checkoff-funded programs and initiatives.

Information provided at the session should help Lucas represent and communicate with his state-level constituents.

Lucas serves on the board of the Pennsylvania Beef Council, the group charged with directing and investing half of all beef checkoff dollars collected in Pennsylvania.

State beef councils may invest a portion of their fifty cents in national and international programs to extend national efforts; therefore, state directors need to know how their state dollars are being coordinated with national dollars to meet consumer needs.

"Directors have a responsibility to represent their state's views in national checkoff efforts, as well as to carry information back to their home states about programs," said Steve Smola, NCBA Federation of State Beef Councils Division vice chair and host of the training session.

NCBA contracts on a non-profit basis with the Cattlemen's Beef Board (CBB) to conduct producer-directed checkoff programs on behalf of the industry. "Part of our role is to facilitate the coordination of programs and dollars between the state and national levels. This is one reason we host the director orientation - to keep communication flowing and keep us all on the same page," said Smola.

Lucas, along with other attending state directors, heard program updates on all areas of national checkoff funding, including promotion, research, consumer information, industry information, foreign marketing, and producer communications. Directors were updated on the current checkoff-funded advertising campaign that is bringing the "Beef. It's What's for Dinner" convenience and nutrition message to beef's target audience - women ages 25-54.

Average Farm Feed Costs for Handy Reference

To help farmers across the state to have handy reference of commodity input costs in their feeding operations for DHIA record sheets or to develop livestock feed cost data, here's last week's average costs of various ingredients as compiled from regional reports across the state of Pennsylvania.

Remember, these are averages, so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

Berks Teachers Tour Trout Farm, Quarry

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

NEWMANSTOWN (Lebanon Co.) — Drought and heavy rains could have taken their toll on the "Home of the Rainbow."

Fortunately, the water flowed cool, the trout didn't escape, and for those who operate the 24-hour-a-day, seven-day-per-week job in caring for Arrowhead Springs Trout Hatchery near Newmanstown, the past year was business as usual.

"We're a fish and water business," said Mike Ludwig, son of the founder, Ed. "We rely on both of them."

Mike spoke to more than a dozen Berks County teachers Tuesday afternoon at the Berks County Ag In The Classroom Teacher Seminar.

The teachers toured the 400-acre fresh water spring that houses a rainbow trout hatchery.

Mike was quick to inform the group that Arrowhead boasts a "bona fide spring." Excess water from the spring is used in rearing pools to grow trout.

There are six major springs at the hatchery. The water sold, according to Ed Ludwig, is under contract with Crystal Springs, with a plant in Lancaster.

Flow from the springs is between 1,800-2,000 gallons per minute. The flow is at ground temperature of 51 degrees year-round.

The main spring, circular and measuring 25 feet across and about three feet deep, supplies water to two four-inch pipelines that fill the pools. The spring supplies water at a rate of 600 gallons per minute.

The main spring is enclosed in a stainless steel roof, and the water is "tested every day," said Ludwig. The surface flow during a good year is about 550 gallons per minute. During last summer's drought, flow was maintained at 400 gallons.

The spring, noted Mike Ludwig, is the "main thrust of the east branch of the Mill Creek, which feeds to the Tulpehocken."

Ludwig said that, despite Hurricane Floyd in the fall, the hatchery didn't suffer.

"We had nine inches of rain in 36 hours," he said. The rainfall amount was "welcome," he said. "The way we're set up, we can handle it all."

The bona fide sandstone spring is always monitored, he said, providing perfectly clear water for Crystal Springs.

At the hatchery (last profiled in Lancaster Farming on Dec. 11, 1982), Ludwig raises some fingerlings. The site maintains a hatch house and nursery and they can strip eggs. However, the work is labor-intensive, noted Mike, with an average of 70 hours per person work week.

To feed the trout, they have to "teach" the fish to eat.

Many fingerlings are purchased from local hatcheries.

Ludwig pointed to some recent news about PCB contamination of fish out of two state hatcheries. The news "hurt our business," said Mike. He handled many phone calls.

But the water is tested by federal and state agencies at the hatcheries "all the time." There are no PCBs in the water or the trout, he said.

Trout ranging in size from 8-11 inches are started in the headwaters. At 11 inches, they are moved into the fee-fishing lake.

Full-time help on the farm is provided by Ed and Darlene Ludwig and their son Mike with his wife, Tammy. Full-time help is also provided by David Dennis.

The farm's history dates back to the 1700s, as a commercial gun barrel factory. The farm became a ladle and grist mill. Though it was a dairy farm in the past, in 1941, with help from Ed's friend, Lee Eck, it became a trout hatchery, noted Mike.

Prescott Quarry

"If you can't grow it, you have to mine it," said Russ Witmer, eastern area manager for Pennsy Supply, Harrisburg.

Pennsy is a construction aggregate provider that operates the Prescott quarry near Lebanon.

Witmer manages quarries and other operations east of the Susquehanna, including four stone quarries and three asphalt and two concrete providers.

Witmer provided a tour of the plant at Prescott to the Berks teachers.

A long while ago, Prescott used to sell much ag lime, but most of its business now is construction-related, including products such as crushed stone, kiln feed, asphalt, blacktop, and other products.

Some of their material, he told the group, goes to the state acid mine creeks to neutralize the water.

The company produces under a million tons of crushed stone, 200,000 tons of blacktop, and 60,000 yards of concrete.

The Prescott facility employs 35 full-time. They own their own fleet of 10 mixer trucks and six dump trucks, and do truck contracting.

The Prescott mine, permitted at 456 acres, was founded in the early 1900s. Recently a plant constructed in 1926 was torn down and replaced.

Witmer told the group, which toured the Prescott mine pit, that in everything they do, every day, "your lives are touched by agriculture or mining." He pointed out the vast array of products that use limestone, from paints, pigments, and plastics to floor products and the many aggregate materials in all sorts of road and building construction.

"Limestone is used in everything we do, every day," Witmer said.

Crop managers and field crop suppliers often buy by-product material from the asphalt plant bag house operated by Pennsy Supply to create their own ag lime.

The mine allows tours regularly at the facility.

Clyde Myers, Berks County extension agent, noted that the Berks teacher tour is provided by financial support from the Berks county Farm Bureau, the Ag In The Classroom Teacher Seminar Program, and through Penn State Berks County Extension. In addition, support is provided by the Berks County Farm-City Council and Berks County Agribusiness Committee.

Myers said the program educates teachers about the agribusiness system and the system's environmental and supply industries.

Meeting To Focus On Pork Cooperative

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pork producers are invited to attend a board of directors meeting of the Pennsylvania Pork Producers Council Monday, May 22, at 7 p.m. in room 202 here at the Department of Ag Building (near the Farm Show Complex).

The purpose of the meeting is to explore possible participation in the newly formed Pork America Cooperative. John Adams from Pork America will be at the meeting to make a brief presentation and to answer questions.

Many Pennsylvania producers have been following the activities of the Pork America closely, but are unsure how this organization might benefit producers in the Northeast. The cooperative was formed recently with assistance from the National Pork Producers Council in response to the low hog prices of 1997-1998.

Membership fees are $500 per person, plus 10 cents per head for registering hogs. Registering hogs does not commit a producer to selling those hogs through the cooperative, but it does give the producer first priority in participating in any Pork America projects.

According to information from the Pork America office, potential opportunities for members vary from facilitating marketing arrangements with existing packing plants to delivering hogs to a packing plant to generate specialty products for a retail grocery chain.

This still leaves open the question about the possibility for producers in the Northeast to participate. Producers are encouraged to attend and take part in the discussion.

A Heart of Roses quilt, done in Norma Grove's favorite shades of mauves and blues, makes an elegant bedcovering. At left, the unusual colors and style of this quilt was an inspiration for the one she made for the recent state Holstein Convention fund-raiser sale, which generated $1,300 towards youth programs.

Quilter's Artistic Talent Covers Her World With Beauty

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

GREENCASTLE (Franklin Co.) — Eight years or so ago, Norma Grove took an applique quilting class. After about six sessions, the Franklin County dairy woman had completed a floral wall hanging which incorporated features including stuffed and padded roses, folded rose buds and "ruching," a method of gathering fabric into a puffed, circular shape.

By the end of the class, Norma understood that appliquing, much like painting, demanded the artisan carefully plan the design, put in the background, then add features such as stems and leaves before finishing with key focal points, like blossoms. She also learned that even a "goof" can be creatively used.

"One day I found this spot on the fabric and could not get it out. My sister looked at it and suggested I applique a spider over the spot," she says with a grin. Since the pattern of the quilting was a web design, the diminutive spider added the perfect, whimsical touch to the framed piece which now hangs in the Grove's family room.

And, she had decided, "I think I like this."

Forty or so quilts later, Norma Grove still likes this both artistic and useful skill. She enjoys it so much that a basket of quilting materials is always ready and waiting by the door, ready to be taken along as she goes out the door, especially if she knows she'll have to spend a few moments somewhere waiting. She enjoys it so much that their two children and four grandchildren all have their own quilts, personalized to their individual tastes. And she enjoys it so much that there are always at least two or three ideas stirring in the back of her creative mind, just waiting for time to be tackled.

One of her most recent designs was a headliner at the annual Pennsylvania Holstein Convention fundraiser auction. When the bid-shouting finally settled, the quilt had generated $1,300 toward state Holstein youth programs from buyer Laszlo Mozes, Greenville. And the quilt, featuring numerous pieces of "cow" fabrics, was on its way across the state, an intended gift for Mozes' son's upcoming wedding.

After much thought, Norma had designed her original quilt for the Holstein youth fundraiser after a throw-sized sample one she had made in a class taken earlier. While she usually favors shades of rose, mauve and blue, set against white or light backgrounds, the sample quilt was done in a rainbow of primary colors. Scattered plentifully throughout the squares of designs were patches of red and green "cow" fabric, with the bright hues stunningly set off by a background of charcoal color.

While Norma still takes an occasional class to learn special techniques, most of her extensive quilting expertise has been developed through trial, error, experience-and even some occasional ripping.

"I can't just sit and do nothing," admits this busy farm wife, who until recently raised the calves on the Grove's dairy and crops farm, as well as helped with milking chores when needed. Her husband, Robert, and son, Keith, and his family, operate their Greencastle farm in partnership. Their daughter, Kim, and her family live just a mile away.

Norma learned to sew as a child and got her own sewing machine when she was just 14. For many years she sewed for not only her own family, but others as well, until she finally became "sort of tired of it." She dabbed with quilting, first trying a "cheater's piece," squares designed with pre-stamped quilt pieces in the fabric. But it was the applique technique which really grabbed her interest.

"My first choice is applique, and the second is pieced quilts," says this avid fabric artist. For awhile, she focused on cross-stitched designs and completed several of those. "They fell out of favor; any maybe someday I'll burn out on doing these."

While her stitching is tiny and even, giving her finished quilts a beautifully-crafted finish, Norma claims she has absolutely no eye for matching colors. Instead, when she has a quilt design idea, Norma teams with her sisters, Debbie Stayman and Judy Lebo, both avid quilters. She credits Deb with having the "eye" of finding just the right colors to complement and set-off one another so that the shades blend, rather than "fight" with each other.

At least twice a year, the trio of quilting sisters make a fabric-buying trip to favorite fabric retailers. It is not unusual for them to spend a day in a single store, matching fabrics and colors for several projects they each have planned, a year or more in advance. Often, they share or trade patterns.

Norma is especially adamant about buying the best quality fabrics she can find for her quilting projects, with a main criteria being that each piece is of pure, "100%" cotton.

"That's very important," she stresses. "It works much nicer for appliquing." To meet her exacting specifications, the fabric must not be too slippery or thin, but must "have body."

"You must buy the focal point fabric first," she adds, a portion of which will be included in each patch of the quilt, sort of the "theme fabric" of the finished product. For the country series of patterns she has favored, Norma generally selects a printed focal fabric, often in florals.

After the fabrics for a quilt are selected, often between 10 to 20 different fabrics per quilt, Norma snips a small swatch of each. She then fastens all the swatches to a piece of paper, labeling the intended use in the planned quilt pattern for each one. Since she may buy fabric a year of more in advance to start-

Bob Grove takes great pride in and is very supportive of his wife, Norma's quilting talents.

Norma Grove's first quilting project was a wall-hanging featuring several different methods of applique quilting. When an unremovable spot developed on the finished piece, she added a sprightly spider to cover it, blending perfectly with the web-quilting design already on the piece.

QUILTING

ing a design, the "key" is a handy identification tool when she is ready to begin the new project.

Before making a single cut, Norma carefully launders each piece of fabric and treats it with a color-set product called "Retayne." A fabric so treated will not "bleed" colors onto the light background during laundering.

On a table in her workroom, Norma traces the quilting design lines of the background fabric, as well as the location of the applique pieces, by laying the light-colored material over the dark-outlined pattern. For dark background fabrics, she has a light table which illuminates from underneath, and traces the design with a light-colored marking pencil.

"To hold it in place I tape it and sometimes sit heavy objects, like cups and saucers, on the fabric to keep it from moving around while tracing the pattern," she explains.

A template is cut from a heavy plastic material for each shape to be appliqued on the quilt, then used to cut as many of that particular shape as needed from the selected fabric. She adds an extra ¼-inch of fabric beyond the traced shape; that is the "turn line," with the ¼-inch margin and its raw edges turned under and stitched into place.

"And I label everything," emphasizes this veteran quilter, who figures it takes a couple of days of quilt preparation before she can take the first stitch.

For narrow strips of pattern design, like flower or foliage stems, Norma stresses that the fabric must be cut on the bias, or diagonal. This allows the fabric to stretch somewhat, allowing curving designs to be stitched without excessive pull or pucker in the finished design.

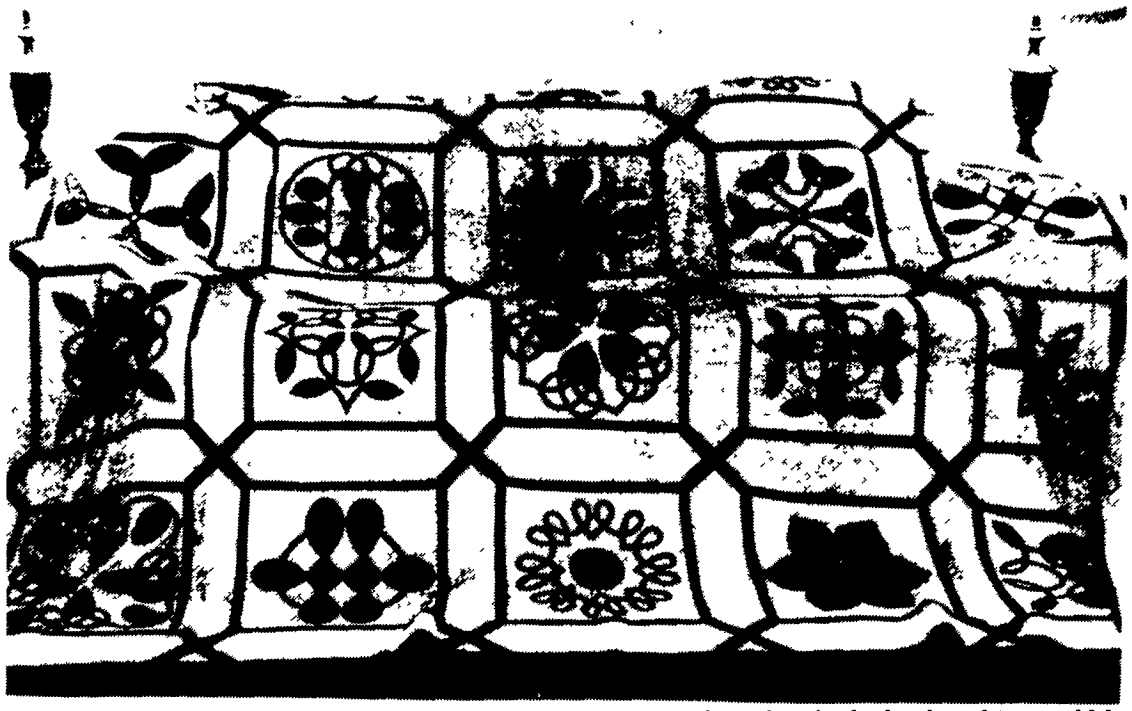
A "tube turner" tool Norma uses enables a quilter to stitch together a fairly narrow piece of fabric, perhaps not much wider than a ruler, then turn it so that the seam is hidden inside. These narrow tubes of fabric can then be curved, woven in and under, each other, to create hand-stitched, intricate designs, as well as form stems and vines for floral designs.

One quilt top Norma has completed, the Celtic design, is made of squares of geometric patterns created by interweaving dozens and dozens of yards of these narrow tube-fabric strips. They are very carefully done, with no start or stops of the fabric visible; those are instead hidden under the intricately-woven, over and under, designs.

"If you don't really pay attention, and you get finished and it's not right, then you rip," says Norma, with a grimace at the thought. But the quality and beauty of her quilts lends the casual observer to conclude that she probably does very little ripping.

A quilting room just off the Grove's kitchen/dining/family room area has lots of glass to allow maximum lighting for quilting, and looks out over the southern Franklin County gently rolling farmland. The Grove's Antrim Way farm is just "two farms away" from where Norma grew up, vowing she would never marry a farmer after spending pre-school mornings helping to milk the family's herd of 25 registered Holsteins.

Then she met Robert, who was from nearby Mercerburg, on a "sort of blind date," via a cousin's birthday party. They married in 1958 and will celebrate their 42nd anniversary in September. In 1970, they purchased their present farm where Robert and Keith milk 100 head of registered Holstein cows, and in 1986, moved to the lovely and spacious brick ranger they added to the original farmstead.



An intricate Celtic quilt design incorporates dozens of yards of stitched and turned bi-as-cut strips of fabric to form the geometric patterns of the squares. No start or stop spots of the strips can be found when the complicated, over-and-under designs are finished.

"We worked side by side during those years," she smiles, adding "and we're still good friends." Robert, who displays obvious pride at his wife's talents, has been very supportive of her craft. In addition to sharing her quilts with family, they have donated several to charitable causes, including the Shalom Christian School at the nearby village of Marion.

During the summer of 1998, the couple joined several other members of their Antrim Brethren in Christ Church congregation to travel, each of their own expense, to the African nation of Zimbabwe on a mission trip. While there, the men helped to put roofs on four churches in the very rural area near the town of Bulawayo.

"They can get the walls up, but help is needed to set the trusses and finish the roofs," explains Robert. While the men handle the heaviest parts of the roofing labor, the women pitch in with some of the lighter chores, as well as help with cooking and laundry. Meals are shared with the natives, mostly of the local cuisine, and the agriculture economy is based on white maize (corn). Housing for the mission volunteers is in a hostel, a former home/school for missionaries children.

The couple was so inspired by their mission visit that they have made plans to return for a three-week stay to help with roofing eight churches this July. While the mission work keeps them fairly busy, no doubt Norma will have some quilt pieces along on which to stitch anytime she has a moment of sitting still.

"I plan to keep making quilts, so long as I have my sight and my hands," she says adamantly of the useful, heirloom art she creates of fabric yardage, thread and needle. "I'm very blessed."

If the million dollar question was "What exactly is EFNEP?", would you know the answer?

EFNEP stands for the Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Program. It is a Federally funded program that is implemented in the states by Cooperative Extension. Counties that offer the program are chosen based on poverty statistics.

The EFNEP program teaches food preparation skills, budgeting food dollars, food safety and nutrition to economically challagened families. Working parents, single homemakers, pregnant women and teens, and youth are taught in small groups or individually by trained nutrition education advisors.

The program consists of a series of lessons on the various topics. Participants may meet in community centers, housing developments, schools, churches, or homes.

Eating a nutritious diet is difficult when little money is available for food and when food preparation skills and food safety knowledge are limited.

Poor diet leads to poor health and low work productivity.

Nutrition Education Advisors (NEA) are specially trained to assist clients to acquire the knowledge and skills necessary to change their attitudes and behaviors thus improving the diets of themselves and their families. Topics may include but are not limited to using food stamps and other resources effectively; stretching food dollars; keeping food safe; selecting, planning and preparing food tasting and healthful meals; feeding babies and children, and reading food labels.

The EFNEP program can be delivered in various ways. These include:

- Individual home visit — Historically this was the basis of the EFNEP program. NEAs met one-on-one in the home with individual clients. Today this is done on a limited basis.
- Group — A more common educational method for EFNEP today is a small group. Participants may meet with the NEA in community centers, housing developments, schools, churches or homes.
- SuperCupboard — A collaborative effort between EFNEP and one or more community agencies. A NEA provides education in nutrition and food preparation to a group of individuals. The agencies provide foods for hands-on preparation during the classes and food to take home to replicate the meal with their family. Agencies may also provide transportation and child care.

Another component of SuperCupboard is a lifeskills speaker arranged by the agency at each class. The topics can inciude first aid, kindergarten readiness, budgeting, stress reduction, personal safety, self sufficiency, and so forth.

- Eating for A Better Start (EFABS) — A program designed for young pregnant women. Lessons cover the discomforts of pregnancy, weight gain, fetal development, the nutrient needs during pregnancy, the dangers of substance abuse, breast and formula feeding, and introducing solid foods to infants.

EFABS program can be implemented at hospital clinic programs, high schools and community agencies.

- 4-H Youth Development - Targets youth ages 8 to 19 in both a traditional and nontraditional 4-H setting. The nutrition education programs for youth can be done over a series of lessons. They are often run in conjunction with other community programs such as township day camps, after-school programs, summer youth programs, etc.

EFNEP works with the Family Centers, YMCA and YWCAs, Hispanic Centers, schools, Boys & Girls Clubs and Juvenile Detention Centers. NEAs and graduated homemakers also run the more traditional in-home clubs.

The EFNEP program is staffed by NEAs who are hired from within the community and are trained and supervised by extension agents and by university faculty and staff. They receive referrals from welfare offices, family centers, churches, agencies, former participants and other individuals across the state. To extend the outreach of their efforts NEAs recruit volunteers on a regular basis. The volunteers contribute countless hours to the EFNEP program by assisting with SuperCupboards, groups, 4-H, transportation, etc.

Does EFNEP make a difference?

Yes!

Statistics show that more than 90% of the graduates make positive food choices. Improvements were made primarily in consumption of fruits, vegetables and dairy products.

In addition, clients reported spending less dollars on food, a reduction in their reliance on emergency food sources and improved food safety practices.

NEAs report various socioeconomic benefits to families including awareness of other community services, enrollment in GED classes, increase in skills that contribute to job readiness, and a myriad of parenting and socialization skills.

Final answer to the million-dollar question, if asked: The Expanded Food and Nutrition Education Program works!

Why?

"Why is it a poppy, Grandma?

"I don't know why it's called that, Josh. But isn't it a pretty color? See, there are lots more of them coming here on the pond bank. Maybe they'll be different colors."

"Why are they here?"

"Because Grandpa planted some wildflower seeds here last year and some of them grew into these poppies.

No, we don't want to pick them all, because we need to let some of them go to seed for more next year."

Why?

Why, indeed? On this evening-walk-around-the-meadow time, our five-year- old quizzer was exercising two of his favorite loves: picking flowers and asking questions. Before we wandered very far from the plant source of the fire-engine-red poppy bloom, we had decided maybe we needed a "mommy" to go with the poppy. And maybe a grandpoppy and a grandmommy bloom, too.

Farther along, we yanked off a couple of stalks of what I grew up calling wild mustard, and The Farmer calls "yellow rocket." Or maybe they're two different plants.

"Why are they yellow rockets?"

"I don't know, Josh. Maybe because they're tall and stand straight up in the air, like rocket ships ready to blast into the air."

Ahead we spotted the first blooms of the young rhododendron shrubs planted in the more shaded areas along the little stream which flows out of the meadow. We don't want to pick those, I suggested.

"Why?"

And before my explanation was out that the plants were still too small to have stems broken from them, the cluster of fushia pink rhodie blooms had been added to the growing bouquet for his mom. Oh well, a little pruning never hurt.

Adding to his growing fistful of colorful wild (and tame) flowers were a few stalks of one of the common plants which thrives along the roadsides, lumped in what that assortment we usually generalize as "weeds." This one produces quite a pretty little flower, pure white, each separate blossom slightly less than inch wide. Its five triangular petals are each shaped like tiny, elongated hearts, clustered around a sort of teeny, feathery center. And poking out of the center are hair-like, yellowish-white reproductive parts, rooted deep into the puffy green calyx under the five Valentine petals.

We have all driven, walked, biked, jogged past, and mowed off oodles of these blooming "weeds" in a lifetime and most of us never really looked at them. Or even cared. But when added to Josh's fistful of blooms, they were really quite dainty and pretty. They even had a light, sweet scent, a definite plus in any bouquet.

Later, at dusk, Derra Dog and I walked the short distance to where a whole patch of the white blossomed roadside weed was blooming. Flowers for indoor bouquets are rather sparse right now and a bunch of them plopped into a small white stoneware pitcher made a very attractive natural arrangement, scenting the whole corner of the kitchen.

Intrigued, I dug out a couple of weed and wildflower identification guides and repeated the kids' favorite question: Why? One would think some botanist could have come up with a name more appealing than "bladder campion."

How would you explain that one to a five-year old plant lover?

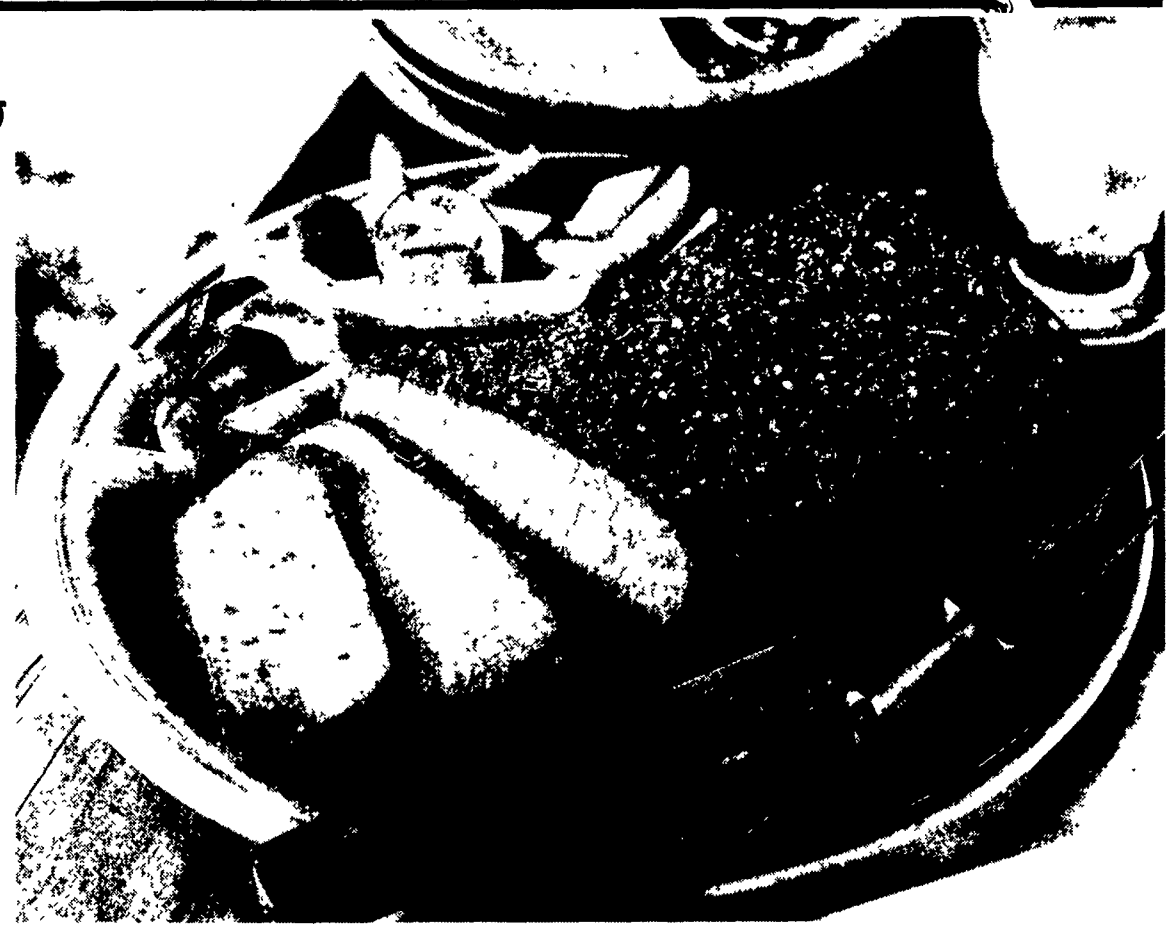
Great Grilling Get-Togethers



Looking for more flavorful grilling ideas? For a copy of "The Supreme Guide to Beef Marinades," send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Pennsylvania Beef Council, 1500 Fulling Mill Rd., Middletown, PA 17057-3116.

Fire up the barbecue!

Grilling season is underway.

Who can resist the mouthwatering aroma, the sensational sound of meat sizzling, and the great flavor of a juicy steak or burger from the grill?

For best results, backyard chefs need to be familiar with two types of grilling — direct and indirect. The method used depends on the type of food you will be grilling.

The direct method is most popular and used for meat cuts that cook in a short amount of time, such as burgers, sausages, steaks, and kabobs. Simply place the meat directly on the grid above the ash-covered coals and cook to perfection.

The indirect method is most often used for roasts and extra-thick steaks, which require longer cooking at lower temperatures. Arrange charcoal on each side of the fire grate, making sure coals are burning equally on both sides.

Place an aluminum foil drip pan in center of fire grate between coals. Place meat on grid above the drip pan. Cover and grill and cook with the damper open as the recipe directs.

Safety should be a focus of any cookout:

- Never partially grill meat and finish cooking later.
- Cook food completely — pork cuts should be cooked to 160 degrees internal temperature on a meat thermometer.
- Don't reuse liquid marinades.
- Marinate meats under refrigeration.
- Don't use the same platter and utensils for raw and cooked meats.

Try these great tasting recipes.

1 medium eggplant, sliced ½-inch thick
1 green pepper, cut vertically in eighths
1 sweet red pepper, cut vertically in eighths
1 large onion, sliced ½-inch thick

Cover potatoes with water, bring to a boil, and simmer 5 minutes; drain. Combine honey, wine, garlic, salt, pepper, and thyme; mix well. Place vegetables in oiled barbecue grill over hot coals. Grill 20-25 minutes, turning and brushing with honey mixture every 7-8 minutes.

CARRIBBEAN JERK BEEF STEAK

¼ cup Italian dressing
1 tablespoon Worcestershire sauce
1 tablespoon firmly packed brown sugar
1 large jalapeno pepper, seeded and finely chopped
1 teaspoon ground allspice
1 teaspoon ground ginger
1 top round steak, 1 inch thick (about 1½ pounds)

For marinade, combine all ingredients except steak. In large, shallow nonaluminum baking dish or plastic bag, pour ½ cup marinade over steak; turn to coat. Cover, or close bag, and marinate in refrigerator, turning occasionally, 6 to 24 hours. Refrigerate remaining marinade.

Remove steak from marinade, discarding marinade. Grill, turning occasionally and brushing frequently with refrigerated marinade, 16-18 minutes or until steak is medium rare to medium doneness. Makes 4 servings.

Cooking Beef Is As Easy As 1, 2, 3

What is the key to successful beef cookery? First, choose an appropriate method for the cut you've selected. For tender cuts, dry heat methods such as broiling, roasting, pan-broiling, sauteing/pan-frying, and grilling are best. Moist heat methods, such as braising and cooking in liquid, are better choices for less tender cuts. The following tips help make cooking beef by any method as easy as 1, 2, 3.

Pan-Broiling Beef

1. Heat heavy nonstick skillet five minutes over medium heat.

2. Season beef (straight from refrigerator), as desired. Place beef in preheated skillet (do not overcrowd). Do not add oil or water. Do not cover.

3. Pan broil according to recipe, turning once. (For cuts one inch thick, turn occasionally) Remove excess drippings from skillet as they accumulate. After cooking, season beef with salt, if desired.

Pan-Frying Beef

This cooking method is best for thin, tender beef cuts. Lean cuts, such as cubed steaks or floured and breaded cuts, may require additional oil to prevent sticking.

1. Heat small amount of oil in heavy nonstick skillet over medium heat until hot.

2. Season beef (straight from refrigerator), as desired. Place beef in preheated skillet (do not overcrowd). Do not add water. Do not cover.

3. Pan-fry to desired doneness, turning occasionally. After cooking, season beef with salt, if desired.

Broiling Beef

1. Set oven regulator for broiling; preheat for 40 minutes. During broiling, the oven door for electric ranges should be left ajar; the oven door for gas ranges should remain closed. (However, consult you owner's manual for specific broiling guidelines.)

2. Place beef (straight from refrigerator) on rack of broiler pan. Season beef, as desired. Position broiler pan so that surface of beef is within specified distance from the heat as indicated in chart.

3. Broil according to recipe, turning once. After cooking, season beef with salt, if desired.

Stir-Frying Beef

Cook beef and vegetables separately, then combine and heat through. The cooking liquid may be thickened with cornstarch dissolved in water, if desired.

1. Partially freeze beef for easier slicing. Cut into thin, uniform strips or pieces. Marinate to add flavor or tenderize while preparing other ingredients, if desired.

2. Heat small amount of oil in wok or large heavy nonstick skillet over medium-high heat until hot.

3. Stir-fry beef in half-pound batches (do not overcrowd), continuously turning with a scooping motion, until outside surface of beef is no longer pink. Add additional oil for each batch, if necessary.

Roasting Beef

1. Heat oven to temperature specified in chart.

2. Place roast (straight from refrigerator), fat side up, on rack in shallow roasting pan. Season roast, as desired. Insert oven-proof meat thermometer so tip is centered in thickest part of roast, not resting in fat or touching bone. Do not add water. Do not cover.

3. Roast according to recipe. Transfer roast to carving board; tent loosely with aluminum foil. Let roast stand 15 minutes. (Temperature will continue to rise 5 to 10°F to reach desired doneness and roast will be easier to carve.)

Grilling

1. Prepare charcoal for grilling. When coals are medium, ash-colored (approximately 30 minutes), spread in single layer and check cooking temperature. Position cooking grid. (To check temperature, cautiously hold the palm of your hand above the coals at cooking height. Count the number of seconds you can hold your hand in that position before the heat forces you to pull it away; approximately four seconds for medium heat).

2. Season beef (straight from refrigerator), as desired. Place on cooking grid directly over coals.

3. Grill according to recipe, turning occasionally. After cooking, season beef with salt, if desired. (Because gas grill brands vary greatly, consult your owner's manual for grilling guidelines.)

Cooking In Liquid

The cooking liquid may be reduced or thickened for a sauce, as desired.

1. Coat beef lightly with seasoned flour, if desired. Slowly brown on all sides in small amount of oil in heating pan. Pour off drippings. Omit browning step for corned beef brisket.

2. Cover beef with liquid (e.g. broth, water, juice, beer or wine). Add seasoning, as desired. Bring liquid to boil; reduce heat to low.

3. Cover tightly and simmer gently over low heat on top of the range according to recipe or until beef is fork-tender.

Braising Beef

The cooking liquid may be reduced or thickened for a sauce, as desired.

1. Slowly brown beef on all sides in small amount of oil in heavy pan. Pour off drippings Season beef, as desired.

2. Add small amount (½ to 2 cups) of liquid (e.g. broth, water, juice, beer or wine).

3. Cover tightly and simmer gently over low heat on top of the range or in a 325°F oven according to recipe or until beef is fork-tender.

1 clove finely chopped garlic
1 teaspoon garlic powder
1 teaspoon dried oregano
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon freshly ground pepper

Whisk the above ingredients until well mixed. Add:

½ cup olive oil

Whisk again and set aside.

1 head garlic

Remove outer skin of the garlic, leaving head intact. Place in aluminum foil and drizzle with 1 tablespoon olive oil. Seal tightly and bake at 450 degrees until soft, about 20-30 minutes. When cool enough to handle, squeeze garlic out of each clove and reserve.

6 cloves finely chopped garlic
3 tablespoons olive oil
1 tablespoon fresh basil, roughly chopped

Saute the above for about three minutes. Be careful not to burn garlic. In a food processor, add the following puree:

2 tablespoons olive oil
¾ cup marinated sun-dried tomatoes

Then add:

⅓ cup shredded fresh basil (minus 1 tablespoon used above)
6 oil-cured black olives, pitted
1 teaspoon capers

Puree and set aside.

Mix together:

⅓ cup ricotta cheese with roasted garlic. Mix until fairly smooth. Set aside.

Prepare 6-8 portabello mushroom caps (about 6-8-ounces each)

Heat grill that has been lined with heavy-duty aluminum foil to hot. Prepare the mushrooms. Remove stems and use them for another recipe. With grill side down, slice part of cap off, making sure not to cut into base. Turn mushroom over so that the cup side is up. Set caps aside.

In base of mushroom, spread one-sixth of tomato mixture inside each one. Spread in each cap 1 heaping tablespoonful ricotta mixture. Place cap back on top of filled mushroom and drizzle with the reserved basil-tomato mixture.

Place filled caps on grill and close. Cook about 15-20 minutes or until caps are soft when you test with a knife.

Serve with balsamic dressing.

½ cup shredded mozzarella
½ cup Monterey Jack cheese
¾ teaspoon dried oregano

Combine olive oil and garlic; set aside. Cut roll of refrigerated dough into quarters. Flatten each quarter into a 5-6-inch circle. Brush both sides of the circle with oil mixture.

Place dough circles in center of cooking grill. Grill 6 minutes. Transfer circles, grill side up, to a piece of heavy foil. Spread each with some pizza sauce. Top with bacon, mushrooms, and onions. Sprinkle on cheese and oregano.

Return pizzas on foil to the cooking grill. Grill 7-9 minutes more or until cheese melts and

York County Dairy Princess To Be Selected

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) — Two candidates, Heather Crowl and Holly Rankin will vie for the honor to represent York County as dairy princess for the upcoming milk promotion year.

Heather and Holly, along with several younger candidates for the county's milk promotion team, will be the features of the 2000 York County Dairy Princess pageant, beginning at 7:30 p.m. May 27 at the York 4-H Center.

Heather, 18, is the daughter of Joyce and Ellis Crowl, McCall's Ferry Road, Airville. She will graduate in June from Red Lion Area High School and plans to pursue a medical assistant course of study at the Yorktowne Business Institute to prepare for a career working in the private medical practice field.

A long-time cattle show enthusiast who owns 20 head, most of them Milking Shorthorns, Heather is active in both the Milk and Money Dairy 4-H club and the Red Lion FFA chapter. In addition to working with her cows, Heather enjoys country line dancing. The Crowl family's operation includes 70 head of milking cows and 275 acres cropped to corn, hay, soybeans, wheat and barley.

Holly, 17, is the daughter of Jon and Sharon Rankin, Bellevue Road, Red Lion. A junior at Red Lion Area High School, Holly plans to study agriculture following her graduation in 2001, majoring in dairy or ag business.

Holly is employed at Perrydell Dairy Farms, where she helps with milking the 120 head at the producer-processor operation, as well as mixing feed, breeding cows, and assisting with field work. She shows dairy cows in the 4-H and FFA programs and plays high school soccer. Holly enjoys participating in rodeos and is a fan of music and dancing.

Three daughters of the Daniel and Lori Baumgardner family, West Barrens Church Road, Dillsburg, will take part in the pageant to select the county's dairy promotion court.

Heather Baumgardner, 16, is a dairy ambassador candidate. She is home schooled and will complete her studies for high school graduation as a senior in 2001.

Among the activities Heather enjoys are Bible quizzing, playing the piano, and participating in mission work and trips through the family's church affiliation. At the Baumgardner family's Barrens View Farm, Heather helps with the variety of chores involved in tending 60 milking cows and 130 acres of corn, alfalfa, mixed hay and barley.

Amy Baumgardner is 9 and a candidate for dairy miss. She is in third-grade homeschooled studies and pitches in with the rest of the family for farm chores, helping to milk and feed the young stock. Amy enjoys studying sire books with her dad, and helping to select mating bulls. One of her favorite animals on the farm is her own calf, Sam.

Little dairy miss candidate Kathryn "Katie" Baumgardner is 5 and in first-grade studies. Katie also helps with the Barrens View milking herd, including lending a hand at calf-feeding time. She especially looks forward to feeding the farm's kittens.

A second dairy miss candidate who is fond of tending the farm's kittens is Amber Thoman, 6. The daughter of Gail and Gary Thoman, Dunkard Valley Road, Dallastown, Amber is a kindergarten student at Loganville Elementary School. She enjoys playing with the calves from the dairy herd, as well as practicing with them for show ring competition when she is a little older.

Along with the upcoming pageant, the county milk promotion committee is raising funds from the dairy industry and agribusiness supports to help support the young ladies' public awareness efforts. Contributions may be made to the York County Dairy Promotion Committee, in care of treasurer Gary Thoman, 1886 Dunkard Valley Road, Dallastown, PA 17313.

Hobbyists Plan Chickentown Gas And Steam Association Show

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

SOMERSET (Somerset Co.) — The Chickentown Gas and Steam Association Show, from 9:30 a.m. to 6 p.m., on Saturday and Sunday, May 27, 28 three miles southwest of Somerset in the Chickentown Grove, is just what the hobbyists of bygone machinery, ordered. Not a hard-core commercialized event, it rather, is a laid back family affair with activities and home-made food to make anybody feel at home.

"Simpler times," is what you get at the Chickentown Gas and Steam Show and these fellows intend to continue preserving simpler times. That's why they hope to see adults and youngsters come together for a sampling of less stressful and more fun, simpler times.

Seven years ago, the show grew out of a gathering of hobbyists who had the idea of holding a weekend get-together to demonstrate the gas and steam equipment they owned.

"It started out as a picnic of interested hobbyists — guys who were going to demonstrate and have a weekend of fun," reported Roger Raymond, Sipesville, the organization president.

"We had so much fun the first time, we decided to keep on going."

The association six years ago became a non-profit entity, but they want their show to retain its flavor.

"I would rather refine our demonstrations than go to big," Raymond said.

Dave Weimer lives near Jay Hemminger who owns the Chickentown Grove. Weimer's machines consist of a little half-scale steam engine that is 40-years old, a Farmall Cub that is 50, and a 25-year old Cub Cadet.

"Ever since I was a kid I liked steam engines," Weimer said. "There is something about those old steam engines."

"They hiss and puff once you get 'em fired up. You fill the boiler with water, grease and oil her up, build the fire and heat the water till it turns to steam. Then that monster comes alive!" he said.

Unlike today's computerized equipment, Weimer says if you have any mechanical ability at all you can get an old tractor running without calling someone else to do it for you.

There will be various demonstrations at the old sawmill the association added last year, after earlier dismantling it at State Correctional Institution, Laurel Highlands, which formerly was the Somerset State Hospital.

In its day, the sawmill provided the means for Somerset State Hospital to be as self-sufficient as possible. At the time, patients who were capable built furniture from the cut lumber. Many such items were then sent to other units in the state hospital system, Raymond said.

Dismantling the Farquhar sawmill, built originally in York, was tedious work. Each board was numbered to ensure its accurate reconstruction in Chickentown Grove. Twenty men from the association who had already undergone the required background checks, said they also worried about working under nerve-wracking eyes of tight state security.

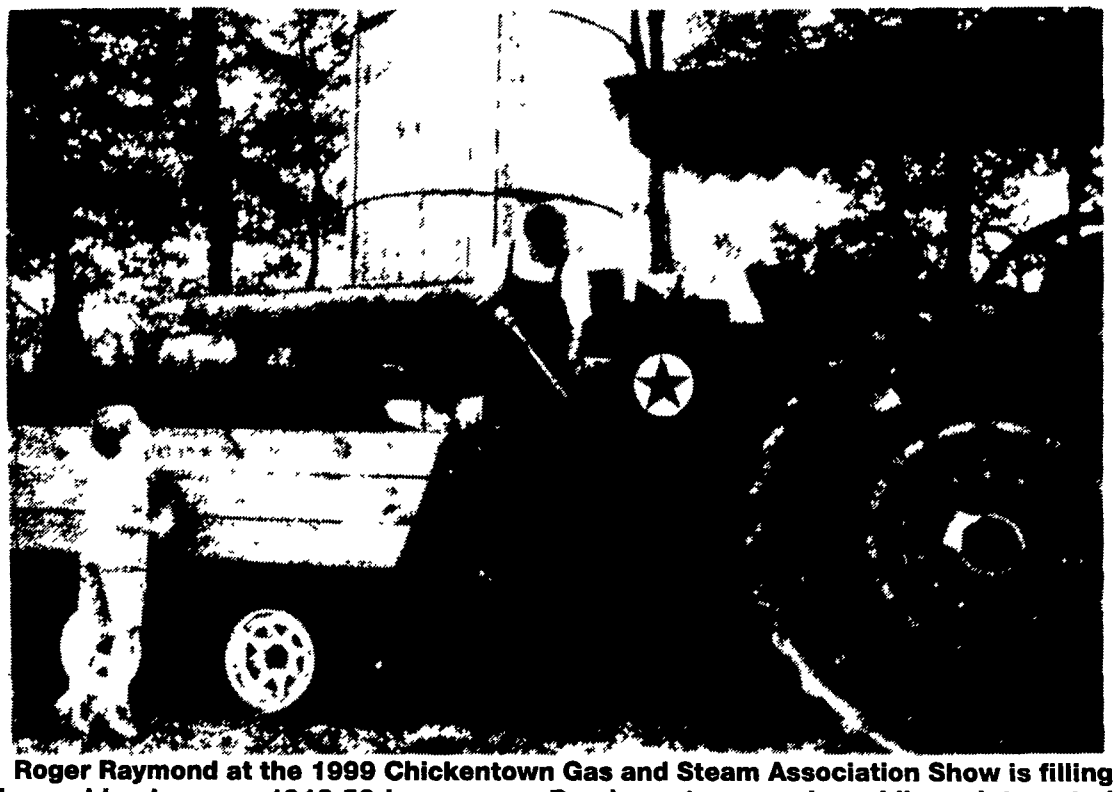
The Chickentown Gas and Steam Association welcomes all types of antique equipment to the show. Privately-owned engines and steam engines will be featured, including the 20th century steam traction engine that Michael Miller of Rockwood owns. The rare gem was built in the early 1900s in Boynton, Elk Lick Township by Mennonite preacher, the Rev. Gideon Miller of Springs, Somerset County.

Corn shelling, corn grinding, and plowing will be demonstrated. There will be crafts for the ladies, a kiddies tractor pull, farm toys show, live music and primitive camping. Foods include chuck wagon Bar-B-Q, apple dumplings, homemade pies, and ice cream.

First time operators should call Raymond at (814) 445-7070, or Don Ream, secretary, at (814) 445-4752 for information and registration.

The Memorial Day weekend event will also see a 1950 E-3 Co-op tractor chanced off by the Chickentown Gas and Steam Association. If the winner doesn't want the piece, a cash option of $500 will be made.

The Chickentown Grove is southwest of Somerset. Take Exit 10 off the Pennsylvania Turnpike. From the toll booth make a right turn at the second light onto North Center Avenue and follow for approximately two miles. Turn right onto Cannell Drive then follow for three miles. There will be directional signs along the way.



Roger Raymond at the 1999 Chickentown Gas and Steam Association Show is filling the coal bunker on a 1918 50-horsepower Pearless steam engine while an interested child looks on.

Berks Names New Dairy Princess

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Lucinda "Cindy" Bray, was crowned the 2000-01 Berks County Dairy Princess recently. For the past year she had served as the Berks County alternate dairy princess. Because of her dedication to the dairy industry and dairy products, Cindy again ran for the dairy princess title.

Cindy is the 18-year-old daughter of John and Marcia Bray of Richland with whom she resides. She also has an older sister Lisa.

Currently Cindy is serving as treasurer of her senior class at Tulpehocken High School. In school she is a member of Student Council, the National Honor Society, and was Tulpehocken's Outstanding Young women of the Year. She also played field hockey and soccer for Tulpehocken.

Cindy is currently employed part-time by Way-Har Dairy Farm. She also cares for the Jerseys and Holsteins on her family farm, Mountain Edge Farm. Throughout the year you can find Cindy showing her dairy cattle and market swine at county and state fairs.

In the fall, Cindy will be attending Penn State University, University Park, to major in landscape architecture.

During the evening pageant, Cindy gave a speech about the family farm to the 85 people in attendance. She praised the farm for showing her the joys and sorrows of life and for teaching her responsibility and work ethic. According to Bray, she will always have a "never ending respect for American Farmers."

Following her speech, Cindy was asked to answer an impromptu question. "You have been chosen to go into space for five years. All food, medicine, and clothing are provided for you. You are allowed to take only three personal items with you, what would they be? Without much thought on the question, Cindy responded that she would take her favorite cow Nicole, her hockey stick, and her favorite car "Jetta."

During the pageant, Jaylene Lesher was crowned Berks County li'l miss dairy princess. Jaylene is the 5-year old daughter of William and Lolly Leshner of Bernville. She has a brother Joshua and a sister Laura. Jaylene helps to move the cows from the pasture and also assists in the milking parlor on her family's farm, Way-Har.

She is a kindergartner at Strausstown Elementary School and is a member of Zion Blue Mountain UCC Sunday School. Jaylene also likes to dance and take riding lessons with her horse, John Henry.

Both Cindy and Jaylene succeed Michelle McMichael and Ashley Mohn who served as dairy princess and li'l miss this past year.

Michelle said the best part of being the Berks County dairy princess, was getting out, meeting people, and letting them know about the dairy industry.

Also giving up her Berks County Li'l Miss crown was Ashley Mohn, the daughter of Steve and Karen Mohn of Womelsdorft. Ashley gave a farewell poem to thank everyone before crowning Jaylene. She said that bank promotions were fun because they handed out ice cream, and ice cream is her favorite dairy product.

Emcee for the pageant was Jennifer Grimes, former Berks County and Pennsylvania Dairy Princess.

Put quality silage under wraps

New Holland round bale wrappers are the low-cost alternative to traditional silage storage—they seal your silage bales in "mini silos". You can harvest silage during peak feed quality, store it with greater flexibility, and feed it more efficiently with less waste.

Choose from two models:

- Model B27P is an economic utility wrapper for medium-volume silage producers
- Model B37P is ideal for custom harvesters or operations wrapping large volumes of bales

Both offer a side-mounted lifting arm, three-belt turntable, two large side-support rollers, and cable controls. The B37P is available with computer controls.

No Kidding: Quads Born To Shropshire Ewe

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

KLEINFELTERSVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Paul Eberly has been raising purebred Shropshire sheep for 50 years

"I've had many sets of twins and triplets over the years, but this is the first set of quadruplets," Eberly said.

The quads, born April 14 to an 8-year-old ewe, are spunky, healthy lambs that enjoy romping in the outdoors.

"Initially, all four lambs nursed, but as they grew older, so did their appetites," Eberly said. He supplemented with bottle feeding the smallest of the four.

Eberly and his wife Ferne own a little farmette in the village of Kleinfeltersville. Being allowed to raise sheep in a residential area has been "grandfathered," and will not be allowed by zoning if Eberly stops raising sheep on the property.

Sometimes the sheep escape and get into the neighbor's flowerbeds. To prevent their escape, Eberly had installed an electrical fence, but the neighbors convinced him to remove the electric fence because the neighborhood children congregated at the fence to watch the sheep.

Eberly knows the fascination lambs hold for youngsters. He started raising Dorset sheep when he was 12 years old and showed purebreds at the State Farm Show. When he left for college, his brothers took over his flock, but eventually abandoned the venture while Eberly attained a bachelor's degee, taught physical education and chemistry, and joined the Navy, where he served as a World War II navigator in the southwest Pacific. After Eberly returned home, he purchased a few Shropshire lambs.

"The Shropshire is a nice lamb for wool and meat," Eberly said. The flock increased and by 1985, Eberly had 85 ewes.

The Eberlys had three sons who helped out with the flock. When the oldest son was sent to Vietnam, Eberly reduced the flock, but his youngest son retained his interest in sheep. After the son became an electrical engineer, married, and settled on a farm in Centre Hall, he began raising Dorset lambs. However, he found the market wasn't viable in his area, so after each breeding season, he gives the lambs to his dad to put on pasture to finish and to market.

Now retired, Eberly finds great pleasure in shepherding his own Shropshires and his son's Dorsets.

"I sell them between 90-100 pounds, either privately or at New Holland (Sales Stables)," Eberly said.

"I always have a pet," Eberly said. For the past 11 years, his favorite has been a ewe named after his granddaughter Chelsea.

He pampers the pet ewe by hand-feeding her apples and allowing her to graze on the lawn. In return, Chelsea serves as the leader of the flock when he wants to move them.

Eberly purchases colostrum from friends who have dairy cows and freezes it in 4-ounce glass nursing bottles until needed for lambs. The colostrum is fed immediately after birth if a ewe does not have sufficient amounts for her offspring.

"You can't feed lambs colostrum after they are 24 hours old or it works as a laxative," Eberly said.

Although Eberly enjoys the birthing season and usually has little problems, he said of assisting births, "When you have two legs from one lamb and a head from another, you know you have a problem."

Amazingly, the quads were born without any assistance.

"I thought the ewe was finished, and then she had another one," he said of the delivery that spanned about two hours.

Of the April birth, Eberly said, "The birthing season is earlier, but I waited to have the ewe bred because I had a young ram I wanted to try."

Paul Eberly has been raising sheep for more than 50 years. During these years, he has seen lots of twin and triplet births, but this year was the first he had quadruplets born on his Kleinfeltersville farmette.

Lambs are vaccinated at birth to prevent overeating.

"The little lambs can slip through the fence to where the ewes are feeding," Eberly said of the need for the vaccination.

Most of the flock are called by their tag number. Eberly relishes in bragging that they answer when called by individual numbers. Neighborhood kids often hang around and are impressed when Eberly calls out a number such as "143" and the ewe comes running.

Generally Eberly and his son take care of shearing the flock, but this past year, with his son in England, Eberly hired a shearer. The most frustrating problem is that wool prices are so low that it doesn't pay to shear for wool. Nevertheless, Eberly is part of the Berks County Wool Pool, where growers gather to weigh, grade, and sell wool.

Wool, he said, must be stored in burlap bags so it can breathe, and not in plastic.

Eberly is also a member of the Pen-Mar Shropshire Association, (abbreviation for Pennsylvania and Maryland).

Eberly worked for 31 years as a physical therapist at the Veteran's Hospital and served on the naval reserve for 21 years. One year he had a tour of duty during the lambing season. His wife took care of the flock and assisted with the births. She thought she did rather well, but her husband said, "I'll never take a cruise again during lambing season. That was a big mistake. It cost me a lamb and a ewe."

Ferne doesn't miss the responsibility and is content to watch from the kitchen window. Although Ferne doesn't help with the sheep, she has given her own special touch to her husband's lambing venture. She is an accomplished artist and presented Eberly with a beautiful watercolor of his sheep.

Ferne, a former high school art teacher, holds art shows of her watercolor paintings. Of the Eberlys' eight grandchildren and one great grandchild, the oldest one shares Ferne's artistic talents.

The Eberlys enjoy eating lam-

Elderhostel Provides Learning Experiences For Those 55 And Older

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Retired high school teacher Ferne Eberly believes learning should be a lifelong process. Her quest for learning has taken her across the U. S. and to London, Ireland, and the Wales.

Ferne participates in Elderhostel, a nonprofit organization with 25 years of experience in providing high-quality, affordable, educational adventures for adults who are 55 and older.

"Elderhostel is open to everyone. No educational prerequisites or grades are required. Some of the participants are doctors and some never received a high school diploma," Ferne said. "Their ages range from mid-fifties to the 80s."

No tests or assignments are required during the five-day to three week programs offered.

Ferne said, "All you need is an inquisitive mind, an adventurous spirit, and the belief that learning and discovery are lifelong activities."

The 10 programs that Ferne has participated in were related to watercolor or some type of art. But art is only a small part of Elderhostel's offerings.

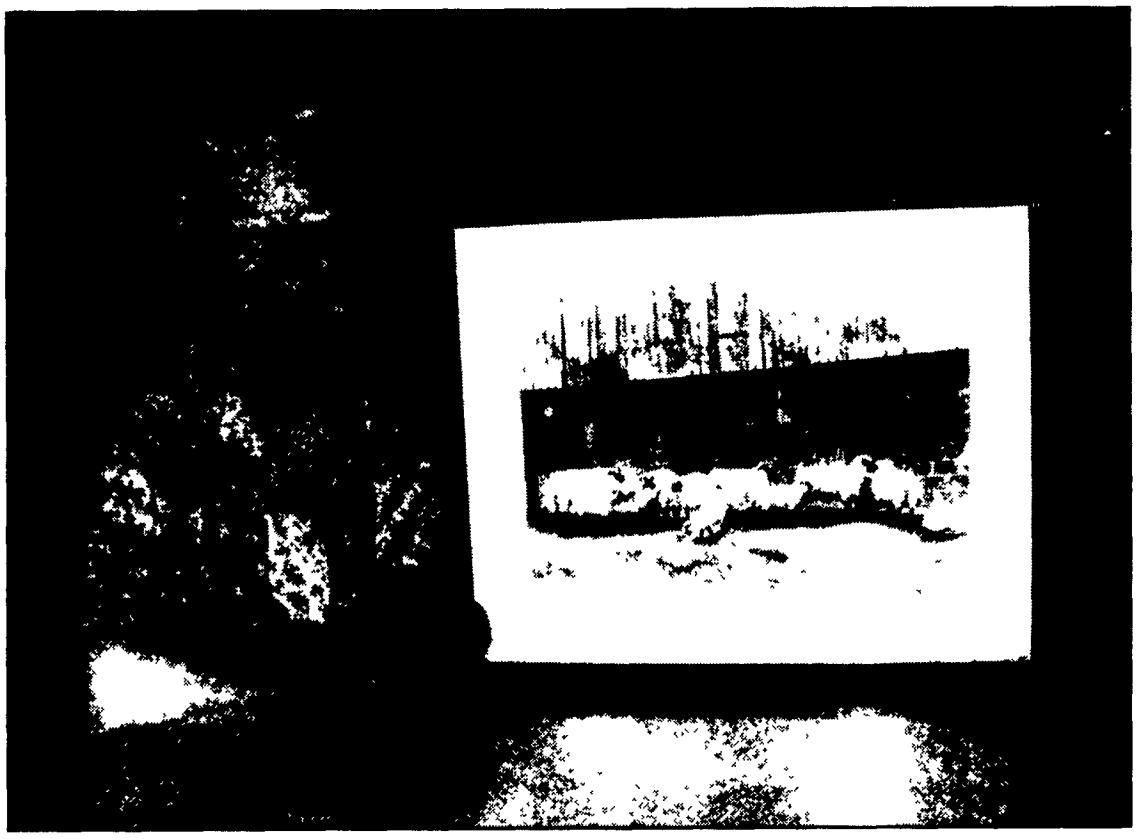
This year, Elderhostel offers 10,000 educational adventures in 50 states and 90 countries. Studies are offered in classrooms, on the beach, in the mountains, in urban settings, and in small villages.

Participants can study birds of Ecuador in the Amazon Basin, Egypt along the Nile, birding and wildlife viewing here and abroad, and historical studies that include field trips. Classes for beginners and advanced studies are available in many areas. Not all classes are considered traditional subjects. Participants can learn to knit, weave baskets, textile print, and photograph wildlife and landscapes.

Some people have always wanted to learn to paint, refinish antiques, sculpt, landscape, or become adept in operating computers. Instructions on these subjects and many others are available in many states. Recreational activities include bicycling tours, hiking, and canoeing.

Participants are responsible for transportation to the program's location, but the cost of registration, accommodations, meals, classes, and field trips are covered in the fee. Average cost of a six-night program is $450, and a five-night program is $430.

"Strangers quickly become friends as you share classes, meals, and free time," Ferne said.



Ferne Eberly has traveled the world to perfect her watercoloring technique. But home has provided the inspiration for this pastoral setting. This is her husband Paul's flock of sheep that she views through her kitchen window.

A spouse or adult companion can attend with an age-eligible participant.

For more information, call Elderhostel at 1-877-426-8056, Monday through Friday, between 9 a.m. and 9 p.m. Eastern Standard Time. Or check the Internet at www.elderhostel.org.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

For several weeks now, we've been blessed with a cockbird who lives in our front yard. He entertains us with his mating call every few minutes. He may be the only free bird of his kind in our township. At one time our sons were able to hunt pheasants every fall in our fields. Even I sometimes shot birds that came too close to the house.

My husband tells me that there will be no apricots this summer as the frost got them. However, the strawberry bed is white with blossoms and should do well now that I have gotten rid of all the weeds.

In the fall I put nine kinds of flower bulbs in the basement. Of course, I knew the name of each kind, but now that I'm ready to plant them, there are two kinds that I can't name. Guess I'll just have to wait until they grow to see what they are. The new dahlias that I just bought have dried up much to my dismay.

The rhubarb is doing fine and it has been shared with neighbors and friends. I've also made some for us to eat and frozen enough for winter use. One shelf in the freezer is filling up with frozen asparagus as Allen picks it every day.

We lost the key to our riding mower. But, Allen managed to start it with a screwdriver. He thought maybe a grandchild took it as he did sit on the seat in the garage. So I asked our daughter in Indiana when she phoned if she knew anything about it. She did not. Then a few minutes after she hung up, she called back and said, "Look on a big log near the window in the garage." Her husband laid it there so that the two-year-old would not lose it.

Some CLA Today May Keep The Doctor Away

Ask anyone you know how they feel about fat and chances are many will refer to it as a guilty pleasure—and for good reason.

Experts have touted the "evils" of fat for the past decade, but not they've begun parroting the advantages research has uncovered.

Why? There is a growing consensus that some fats may actually play a critical role in maintaining well-being.

Take monounsaturated fat, for example. Found in foods such as olive oil, nuts and beef, it may play a protective role—perhaps even reducing the risk of heart disease for some people.

Another beneficial fat that is starting to receive critical acclaim is conjugated linoleic acid—or CLA for short.

Conjugated linoleic acid is a common type of dietary fatty acid belonging to the polyunsaturated fat family.

While scientists have studied CLA for years, they are just starting to share the exciting news.

Keeps You Healthy

CLA has a long list of potential health benefits. In fact, some would even say that CLA goes above and beyond the "call of duty." All fats supply energy, satisfy hunger and transport fat-soluble vitamins like D and E, but CLA has additional benefits. Following are just some of the ways CLA may work to improve your health.

Maintains Well Being

Many studies have shown CLA may inhibit the development of some types of tumors, even sluffing off ones that already exist.

Lowers Cholesterol

Just like monounsaturated fats, CLA has a positive effect on your blood cholesterol. Animal studies have found CLA decreases total and bad (LDL) cholesterol levels, thereby reducing the risk of heart disease.

Makes You Slim

A fat that burns other fats? Sounds too good to be true, but that's exactly what several recent CLA animal studies suggest. In addition to lowering cholesterol levels, CLA also may be effective in reducing body fat and increasing the percentage of lean tissue.

Keeps Sugar Levels In-Check

Move over insulin...here comes CLA! In what could potentially lead to improved dietary treatment for diabetes, a recent study found that CLA may regulate blood glucose levels and thus, prevent or delay the onset of this common disease.

Where It's At

CLA is abundant in foods that come from animals - basically meat and dairy products. Ground beef is an excellent source of CLA, as is milk, yogurt and processed cheeses. CLA can also be found in lesser amounts in chicken, pork, seafood and vegetable oils. So go ahead and enjoy that cheeseburger and feed your body some CLA today.

burger, which they use in place of ground beef.

People sometimes ask Eberly how long he will continue raising sheep.

He admits, "It's rough getting up at 3 a.m. during the lambing season, but I don't know what I'd do if I didn't have sheep."

Neighborhood children often want to bottlefeed the lambs during the daytime. Eberly kiddingly asks them, "Where are you at 3 a.m. when I need you?"

He has a question for readers: "I'd really be interested in knowing how many other breeders have seen quad births in the Shropshire breed," Eberly said.

POURED SOLID CONCRETE
STORAGE SYSTEM SPECIALISTS
START WITH THE BEST!
POURED CONCRETE WALLS
You get about 40% more concrete for your dollar with a poured, solid concrete basement as compared to a hollow core block basement
A poured solid concrete basement weighs about 50 lbs more per cubic foot! Far denser What's more, poured solid concrete walls are monolithic there are no joints!
This is why laboratory tests show poured, solid concrete basements have many times the flexural and compressive strength to withstand the side and down pressures caused by earth, wind, water and building loads and the material density to resist water penetration
Best of all thanks to modern and efficient construction techniques, poured, solid concrete basements are competitively priced
Solid Concrete For:
• Manure Pit Walls • House Foundation Walls
• Hog House Walls • Silage Pit Walls
• Barnyard Walls • Cistern Walls
• Chicken House Walls • Concrete Decks
• Retaining Walls • Concrete Pit Tops

Finally,

a high performance machine

that is much cooler
and very, very efficient.

(Sorry, it's not available in red.)

Introducing the dairy industry's most efficient milk cooling refrigeration unit the Energy Star. Because it is a true refrigeration unit rather than an air conditioning compressor the Energy Star is a superior component to your dairy operation. Its Copeland scroll compressor is specifically designed to handle the large temperature changes required to cool milk. Mueller further increases the efficiency of the Energy Star by adding a single variable speed fan and subcooling coil.

Isn't it time to get that high performance machine you've always wanted. The Energy Star is the industry's most efficient milk refrigeration unit.

Pa. Simmental Association

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — On Friday, March 31, the Pennsylvania Simmental Association and their consigners sold 34 lots of purebred female genetics.

There was a standing-room only crowd in attendance to bid and purchase open and bred heifers, bred cows and cow/calf pairs.

Buyers were in attendance from Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia and South Carolina. Bidding was fast paced and steady throughout the sale at Penn State Ag Arena.

Sale Manager Bruce Van Meter of Impact Marketing and Management, Inc., of Rome, Ga., did an outstanding job of selecting and screening this stellar grouping of cattle, according to the association.

Volume buyers included McClure Mills Farms, Shirleysburg, and Hafco Farms, Canton.

•#37, $4,700 cow/calf pair: "LLL MS Blk Zima," sire BBS Zima D55, consigned by Triple L Farms, New Oxford, and purchased by Cedar Ridge Simmentals, Laurens, S.C.

•#34, $3,900 bred cow: "Black Beauty of TSF," sire Circle S Leachman 600U, consigned By Golden Triangle Simmentals, Gettysburg, and purchased by Tom Vossler, Gettysburg.

•#21, $3,300 bred heifer: "HWF Hayley," sire 600 Plus, consigned by Haven Woods Farms, Stoneboro, and purchased by McClure Mills Farms, Shirleysburg.

Mark your calendars now and plan to attend the Pennsylvania Junior Simmental Association at their annual field day July 8, 2000, at Triple L Farms in New Oxford. In addition to PJSA's Junior Purebred Show, a full day of activities is being planned. For more information, contact Annette Downs, (814) 786-8226.

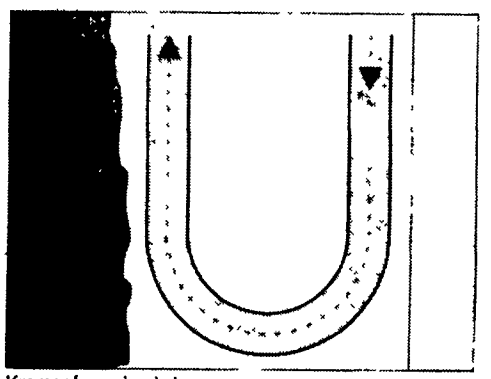
Conventional steering (articulated)



Kramer four wheel steering

When it comes to manoeuvrability, Kramer four wheel steering is the choice to make. Even the tightest corners are accessed, and making distances shorter saves time and money. Kramer four wheel steering is well-designed for precise and safe working. In high-speed version, the drive train automatically switches to front axle steering for long-haul travel.

Big Baler Features On A Smaller Scale

New Idea® 4844 and 4845 Round Balers.

Want the same features as the larger New Idea round balers? Then check out the big features on the New Idea 4844 (4'x4') and 4845 (4'x5') round balers. Like big balers, an open-throat design gives you efficient hay pickup and faster bale starts. The optional hydraulic-drive pickup maximizes crop flow and gentle crop movement.

The New Idea fixed chamber design creates a dense outer shell around a soft breathable inner core. Wide, endless belts handle leaves and other material genetly, so more nutritious leaves end up in the bale.

Visit your AGCO® New Idea dealer today to discover the difference the 4844 and 4845 can make on your baling and on your budget.

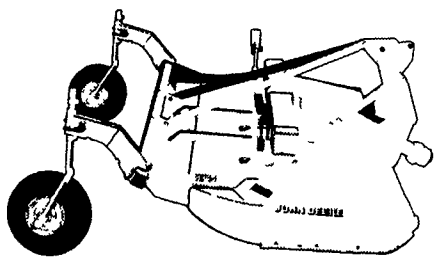
NEW JOHN DEERE ROTARY CUTTERS



- Double-decker design is twice as strong as cutters with a single deck.
- The clean bottom deck promotes better airflow for better cutting/distribution.
- The top deck is domed Water and grass roll off, preventing water buildup and rust.
- Available in 5- to 14-foot cutting widths, for mid- and heavy-duty applications.

EXCLUSIVE SHEARBAR PROTECTION COLLISION INSURANCE

Shearhubs, an exclusive John Deere feature, are standard equipment on all rotary MoCo's. Should the cutterbar receive a severe impact - from a rock, tree stump, or worse - the hub shears, protecting the inner gears. A shearhub costs about $40 to replace, and can be carried in the field. Compare that to the cost of repairing or replacing a complete cutterbar assembly on another machine. Then visit us for details. We can help make sure you're covered.

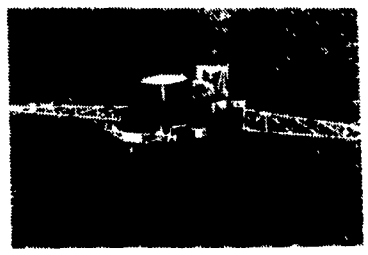
Dealer Among First To Offer New Self-Propelled Field Sprayer

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) – Messick Farm Equipment, Inc. Elizabethtown, is among the first dealerships in North America to offer a new product for cash grain producers, New Holland's SF550 self-propelled field sprayer.

The new SF550 self-propelled field sprayer is designed and built by Ag-Chem Equipment Co., Inc. It is marketed through New Holland's global distribution network as part of a joint venture agreement between the two companies, and is the first product offering of the joint venture.

The SF550 sprayer is designed for custom applicators and large farming operators.

"With the introduction of new plant varieties, spraying is now one of the most critical operations on the farm, alongside seeding and harvesting," said New Holland product marketing manager Greg Emmanuel. "Some producers cover their fields as many as six times during the season, so dependable, cost-effective spraying equipment is a necessity for efficient operation."



New Holland's SF550 self-propelled field sprayer is designed for custom applicators and large farming operators. The SF550's rugged "C"-channel frame flexes to maintain wheel-to-ground contact in all ground conditions, especially when working on uneven terrain.

The SF550's rugged "C"-channel frame flexes to maintain wheeel-to-ground contact in all ground conditions, especially when working on uneven terrain. Power transfer and traction are smooth and steady with full-time four-wheel hydrostatic drive. It maintains all four wheels on the ground for maximum traction, stability and performance, and offers a smoother ride and longer machine life.

The three-range hydrostatic transmission allows travel speeds of 11 mph to 26 mph. Hydrostatic dynamic braking is standard. A 70-gallon fuel tank provides enough fuel to work a full day, so the operator can spend more time spraying and less time refueling.

Variable-rate leaf-spring suspension allows the boom to remain stable, regardless of load. It also provides consistent application rates and reduced maintenance costs and reduces operator fatigue to allow for longer operating hours in a day.

Forage Harvester Available With Kernel Processor

BOISBRIAND, Quebec, Canada — Make your forage work harder for your dairy and beef herds with a harvester that cracks the kernels while harvesting.

Dion Machineries has announced the release of their latest forage harvester, the Dion 1224Xc. This latest harvester is just one example of the high quality products offered by the short liner.

The Canadian based manufacturer has been producing high quality forage equipment since 1920. The Dion 1224Xc is the latest harvester to impact the market. The unit is available with the "Corn Cracker" kernel processor which Dion says research has shown that processed corn silage increases milk production between 2 to 3 pounds per day. Other research has shown increased production of up to 6 pounds per day. Rate of gain for beef herds can also be increased with processed corn kernels.

The forage harvester has a straight through design which improves harvesting capacity while slashing energy consumption. All crop entering the harvester is cut, processed, and blown in a direct line. The unit has an intake width of 24 inches, which is the same width carried right through the 12-knife cutter head and four-paddle blower.

Dion offers two model harvesters. The first comes as a 150-300 hp model with a maximum volume capacity of 25,469 cubic feet per hour at a ⅜-inch cut, making it the largest capacity pull type harvester on the market. The second comes as a 90-150 hp model with a maximum volume capacity of 20,732 cubic feet per hour at a ⅜-inch cut. Both units may be equipped with an 84-inch wide windrow attachment and your choice of a two- or three-row corn attachment.

Agreement Reached For Required Case IH Divestiture

RACINE, Wis.—CNH Global N.V. announced that an agreement has been reached for the sale of its partnership interest in Hay and Forage Industries (HFI) to AGCO Corporation, subject to approval of the U.S. Department of Justice.

The sale was agreed to under terms set by the Department of Justice for approval of the business merger of Case Corporation and New Holland to form CNH in November 1999. It will give AGCO sole ownership of HFI. Case IH and AGCO have been joint venture partners in HFI since 1991.

"We have taken actions to ensure an uninterrupted supply of equipment and parts through our dealer network," said Jim Irwin, vice president of the Case IH North American agricultural business.

Under the agreement, Case IH-branded hay and forage products will be supplied through the HFI plant to the Case IH distribution network until March 2001. Case IH dealers will also have a steady supply of parts for Case IH products produced at the HFI plant through a 10-year renewable agreement.

A separate Case IH line of hay and forage products is in development to replace the HFI line. The new line will be available in the fourth quarter of 2001, ensuring an uninterrupted product supply.

"Our dealers and hay and forage customers can rely on Case IH to provide superior products and services, now and in the future," said Irwin. "These actions demonstrate our commitment to the hay and forage industry."

Full terms of the agreement were not disclosed.

CNH is successfully working toward complying with all regulatory divestiture requirements in North America and Europe. The company recently reached an agreement with the A.R.G.O. Group in Italy for the sale of the New Holland facility in Breganze, Italy. The agreement is pending approval of the European Commission.

In February, CNH completed the divestiture of the Austrian commercial distribution rights of two of its compact tractor models to Lindner Traktorenwerk GesmbH, an Austrian agricultural machinery maker. CNH will continue to produce the Steyr model M-948 and M-958 and Case IH models CS 48/58 tractors at its Case IH Steyr plant in St. Valentin, Austria. Under terms of the divestiture agreement, the St. Valentin plant will supply these tractors to Lindner, which as agreed to sell these tractors to Austrian Case IH and Steyr dealer network under their respective brands. Lindner also will sell the tractors under its own brand through its own dealers. The agreement was approved by the European Commission and already has been implemented.

Corn Checkoff Pays Off With Plastics Plant

BLAIR, Neb. — "Corn checkoff-funded research yields results for farmers if you have a vision, work with industry, and set priorities," said Lee Klein, National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) president-elect and a farmer from Battle Creek, Neb.

Klein has proof. Today, he and other NCGA leaders participated in the groundbreaking ceremony at Blair, Neb., where Cargill Dow is building the first world-scale manufacturing facility to make plastics and natural-synthetic fibers from corn.

"Cargill Dow's action culminates research and market development on polylactic acid (PLA), and NCGA members and all corn growers who pay the checkoff can take pride that their dollars funded the research that has led to this new facility," Klein said.

Expected to be on-line by late 2001, the new facility will use 40,000 bushels of corn per day for an annual use of 14 million bushels. The plant will turn corn into polymers, small chips or pellets of plastic-like material that manufacturers will then process into fabrics for clothing and plastics for cups, food containers, packaging, and home and office furnishings such as carpets. Cargill Dow emphasized that this is the first time a renewable resource, corn, "stands alone on price and performance."

Klein explained how the NCGA worked with Cargill Dow. "Since 1994, corn growers at the national and state-level organizations have made PLA applications research a top priority," he said. "Besides encouraging Cargill and helping the company seek funding through Department of Commerce grants, NCGA invested checkoff dollars from farmers to fund basic research to get things going. And Cargill helped us evaluate research opportunities."

Klein said the combination of Cargill's expertise and Dow's strong industry position will yield important new products for consumers and will open an important market for corn growers.

He further illustrated some of the longer-term opportunities for corn. "This opens the door to the possibility of other price-competitive consumer products made from renewable resources such as corn. The tremendous potential for consumer goods could eventually lead to demand for another 500 million bushels. That additional demand could add 25 cents to the price of a bushel of corn."

Brosius Selected 2000 Penn State Distinguished Alumnus

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Charles C. Brosius, a leading figure in the U.S. mushroom industry and former Pennsylvania secretary of agriculture, has been named a 2000 Penn State Distinguished Alumnus, the university's highest alumni award.

"Charlie has been a dominant force in the Pennsylvania food and fiber systems," said Robert Steele, dean of Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. "We in the college are delighted for him to receive this much-deserved recognition."

Brosius, a native of West Grove, Pa., has achieved an international reputation as an innovator in mushroom cultivation and marketing. The Brosius family business, Marlboro Mushrooms (from which he retired as president in 1995), led the state industry in adapting and developing production techniques to meet the growing fresh-market demand in the 1960s. His lecturing, sponsored research, and published papers continue to establish him as a national authority in mushroom production. He was recently appointed to serve on the National Mushroom Council by the USDA.

He served as Pennsylvania secretary of agriculture from March 1995 through May 1997. As secretary, he chaired the commissions that oversee animal health, soil conservation, the state Farm Show, horse racing and farmland preservation, as well as many other boards. He was instrumental in the formation of the Penn State Agricultural Law Center, a partnership between the College of Agricultural Sciences and the Dickinson School of Law.

After graduating from Penn State in 1952 with a bachelor's degree in dairy science, Brosius managed the family's dairy and mushroom farm, overseeing its transition to mushroom production. He developed strategies for serving the New York City fresh markets, with emphasis on Asian produce buyers. The firm subsequently expanded, acquiring a distribution/trucking concern and real estate holding company.

As a member of the Penn State Board of Trustees from 1989 through 1997, Brosius chaired the Hershey Medical Center Advisory Committee. He served on the board of directors of the Pennsylvania Chamber of Business and Industry and was vice-chairman of the board of directors of Agway Inc. farm supply cooperative. He is also a former director of Telmark Inc., an agricultural leasing and financing company. From 1989 until 1995, he was a director and finance chairman for Curtice Burns Foods Inc., a national food processing and marketing corporation.

In 1978, he was recognized as a Pennsylvania Master Farmer and has been honored with the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau Distinguished Service to Agriculture Award, the Chester County Commissioners' Agricultural Leadership Award, and the American Mushroom Institute Distinguished Service Award. He also has received distinguished alumnus awards from the College of Agricultural Sciences and Alpha Kappa Gamma.

Brosius sits on the Penn State Great Valley Advisory Board and chairs the Penn State Great Valley Grand Destiny Campaign. He is a member of the national Alpha Zeta and Gamma Sigma Delta agricultural fraternities and the Penn State Coaly Honor Society.

Now retired, Brosius lives in West Grove with his wife, Jane, a 1952 Penn State graduate. Their sons, all involved in the family business, also are Penn State alumni: Mahlon (1978, agricultural business management); Thomas (1979, agricultural engineering); and Harold (1980, agricultural engineering).

ASA Pleased With High Level Of Support For Soybean Checkoff

SAINT LOUIS, Mo.—The American Soybean Association (ASA) has learned the USDA has determined that a referendum will not be necessary on the Soybean Research and Promotion Program.

The request for referendum process indicates that the vast majority of U.S. soybean producers support their checkoff.

Out of 600,813 qualified stakeholders, only 17,970 valid requests, less than three percent of the total, were received, far less than the threshold of 60,082 that would have triggered a referendum.

"USDA's request for referendum process validates what ASA producer-leaders have long believed, that is that most soybean producers feel their checkoff is doing a pretty good job for them," said ASA President Marc Curtis, who led ASA's advocacy efforts to promote the positive benefits of the checkoff prior to and during the Oct. 20, 1999, through Nov. 16, 1999, request for referendum period. "ASA has found that producer support for the soybean checkoff increases in direct proportion to a producer's knowledge of checkoff-funded activities and how these programs directly benefit soybean producers."

Producers certifying that they produced soybeans at any time during a period beginning Jan. 1, 1997, and ending Nov. 16, 1999, were eligible to participate in the petition for a referendum. An eligible producer as defined by the USDA, was any person engaged in the growing of soybeans in the U.S. who owned or shared ownership and risk of loss of such soybeans. Eligible individuals not wanting a referendum did not need to take any action.

"ASA will continue its efforts to communicate the benefits of the soybean checkoff to all soybean producers and we can reach out to those 17,970 people who did feel that a referendum should be called," Curtis said. "I'd be willing to take a look at their concerns and welcome an opportunity to tell them why I think the soybean checkoff is a tremendous asset that is building demand for our products."

State soybean checkoffs were originally developed in 1968. In 1989, ASA's voting delegates adopted a resolution calling for passage of a national soybean checkoff in the 1990 Farm Bill. ASA worked directly with Congress to develop the format and structure of today's soybean checkoff program that has helped improve soybean industry profitability and is responsive to soybean farmers' needs.

No Wool Sale, Pool

TUNKHANNOCK (Wyoming Co.)—The Northeast Pennsylvania Sheep and Wool Growers Association regretfully announces that there will not be a wool sale and pool for their producers' year 2000 clip.

Economic reality has dictated this decision based on four months of market research and bid solicitation. The currently accessible market leaves no margin to cover the cost of production and handling.

A complex set of circumstances has generated an abnormal market climate. Marketing channels are glutted with cheap wool from low labor cost and government subsidized foreign sources.

Domestic demand for fine woolen fabrics has declined under pressure from synthetics, and has been further eroded by a "dressing down" trend in contemporary American culture. There is some evidence that the surplus is beginning to work its way through the market.

Although a slow process, social trends are constantly changing. There will be an "up" side in this cycle.

The Northeast Pennsylvania Sheep and Wool Growers Association is a constituent member of the Pennsylvania Sheep and Wool Growers Association and the American Sheep Industry Association. This relationship affords access to state and national resources.

In an attempt to keep the lines of communication open, anyone desiring more information can contact George Hayes, Box 1080, Friendsville, PA 18818, 570-553-2853, the association's president, or Victor Decker, 1119 Sugar Hollow Road, Tunkhannock, PA 18657, 570-833-2486, the association's secretary. A report of association activity is also on file in county extension offices.

"No auger mixer can process and mix dry long hay like a Roto-Mix mixer can."
–Jim Osborn, Queen Acres Farm, Keymar, MD

"When I do the feeding I like to load the hay into the mixer early in the mix. That allows the hay to be processed to a shorter fiber length. When Jim does the feeding he loads the hay in last, he likes to see a longer fiber. Either way the cows eat it. We clean very little out of the feed bunk."

- J.W. Wotthlie, Farm Manager

Queen Acres Farms is the home of the 7th ranked Jersey herd in the nation, milking 110 cows.
- Using Roto-Mix Model 354 stationary mixer, powered by two 10 hp single phase electric motors. Purchased from Lapp's Barn Equipment in 1997 to replace a 1 yr. old, 4 auger mixer.
- Mixing TMR, 46 lbs. per cow per day, including 5 to 6 lbs. of dry baled hay.
- High herd average for milk production - 19,600 lb. with high protein test and high butterfat test - 5.1%

Having Problems Getting Milk Cold?

Summer heat will soon be here. Plan now with a Mueller pre-cooler. It's an excellent way to lower the cost of cooling milk. It reduces milk temperature with water pumped straight out of your well. Mueller® precoolers are available in sizes to work with any system. If lower eiectric bills would make your life easier, call us and ask for more information on Mueller precoolers.

 Benefits of Fiberglass Wheels ***

- Very Low Maintenance Costs Under normal use the only maintenance costs will be tightening or replacing the tire or rubber. No expensive parts to replace.
- High Performance Regardless of the Elements Wheels stay tight even in hot, dry conditions – No more loose rattling spokes – ever!
- Rugged Heavy Duty Design It takes a major accident or impact to break or twist these wheels.
- Hard Durable Surface Resists scuffs and scratches, paint job stays shinier.
- Easier Cleaning Spokes have all rounded corners, no tight spots for dirt to get into.

 Benefits of Fiberglass Springs ***

- Lightweight A fiberglass spring weighs 22 lbs. less than a steel spring. 44 lbs. less weight on the carriage.
- Durable One Piece Design No bolts to give out or wear.
- Better Performance on Heavy Loads The more weight, the better the ride, will not go flat and bottom out.
- Better Paint Adhesion Easier cleaning – no rust stains running out between the plys. Paint will not blister or peel off.
- Stainless Kits – Now Available For a smoother ride and less bounce

153 ACRE DAUPHIN COUNTY FARM

This farm is ideally located at the base of a mountain range in Northern Dauphin County, (Lykens Valley), near Millersburg. The buildings are set several hundred yards off the main road, creating that perfect Currier & Ives setting everyone dreams about with the mountain as a back drop. The buildings feature a very well maintained brick center hall farm house with 4 large bedrooms and a large country kitchen The out buildings consist of a 38x40 Bank Barn, 25x42 heated shop and 60x120 Morton pole building used for equipment storage. The majority of 100 tillable acres is gently rolling productive farm land with approximately 12 acres of pasture and 41 acres of woodland. This farm would be ideal for vegetable production with it's fertile crop land and abundant water supply for irrigation or it would make a perfect country estate, with it's beautiful setting and buildings.

For Masts, Strawberry Picking Time Generates Its Own Advertising

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

MORGANTOWN (Portion of Lancaster Co.) — Paul D. Mast and family of Conestoga Meadow Farm understand the importance of advertising.

They recently planted additional strawberries behind their farm stand on Rt. 23 about a mile west of Morgantown.

"People drive by and they see you picking strawberries," said Paul at a recent interview at his farm. "So you don't need any signs."

Many who drive by the bright white stand, less than a quarter mile east of the Little Red School House tourist information site, come from Philadelphia and New Jersey.

Jim Groff, a full-time hired man who manages the strawberry fields and helps run the farm stand, said that "you wouldn't believe how far they come for our strawberries. In Jersey, they don't like their berries."

Groff noted that the sandy soil in the neighboring state could have something to do with the effect of taste on certain strawberry varieties. Apparently some better Northeast-type berries, such as Jewel and Early Glow, do well on the clay loam in the eastern part of Lancaster County.

The Masts have planted equal amounts of both strawberry varieties.

Conestoga Meadow Farm is home to about 500 tillable acres, including rented ground, noted Paul Mast.

STRAWBERRY QUALITY

One of the advantages you have as a local grower is the ability to let your strawberries remain in the field until they develop excellent flavor, color, and aroma.

Strawberries found in the grocery store are frequently not fully ripe and have poor flavor. Once a berry is removed from the plant it will develop little (if any) additional flavor. While the berries you harvest early will continue to develop red color, their lack of flavor and aroma will make your berries similar to those in the grocery. This may cause your BIGLERVILLE (Adams Co.) — A video was shown at a series of recent fruit grower meetings throughout the southeast and central parts of the state detailing ways in which, through a joint agriculture department/university effort, growers and agri-industry are working together to contain and control the plum pox virus (PPV).

The virus was first identified in an Adams County orchard seven months ago. The PPV Virus Strain D can add up to big losses for growers, reaching as high as 80-100 percent.

The virus first showed up in Macedonia and Eastern Europe in about 1910-1913 and has spread all over the world.

The virus was introduced to the U.S. a few years ago, brought in by infected material.

In a survey conducted in Adams County, two townships showed positive tests for the virus — Latimore and Huntington, near York Springs. A quarantine was established, extending to a two-mile radius around the infected zone.

Adams County Fruit Farm And Market Emphasizes Ag Education

BIGLERVILLE (Adams Co.) — Education is an essential part of the business for Hollabaugh's Fruit Farm and Market, located here.

Kay Hollabaugh, who manages the market, keeps books and handles the school tours for the fruit farm. She gets really excited about educating children and adults about where their food comes from.

"Children are becoming more and more removed from agriculture," said Hollabaugh. "They need to learn more about where their food comes from and not take it for granted."

Kay's husband Brad is a co-owner of the 500-acre fruit farm, along with his father Donald, Uncle Harold, and brothers Neil and Steve. Twin brothers Donald and Harold purchased the family-owned and operated farm in 1955.

Management responsibilities are divided among the family members. Donald handles pest management and Harold is the assistant production manager. Brad is the personnel/production manager, and Neil is the sales manager. Steve handles service, maintenance, and container management. Steve's wife Vicky also works on the farm as shipping manager.

On the 500 acres, the Hollabaughs grow 350 acres of apples, 75 acres of peaches, and have the balance in plums, apricots, nectarines, pears, and Asian pears. They produce about 100,000 bushels of apples annually.

About 60 percent of their

In Europe, the virus has infected 100 million trees. In 1984, the virus spread to Spain and in 1992, to Chile.

In the video, growers noted how the plum pox can easily put Pennsylvania completely out of the peach business, if not controlled.

The emphasis was placed on continuing cooperation to ensure eradication of the deadly strain. The national effort helps protect a $1.8 billion industry.

Work in Pennsylvania will ensure trees in other states, including California (with 400,000 acres of stone fruit), are protected.

Eradication of PPV is a national issue.

All orchards in the state are being sampled by teams from Penn State with support by USDA and the state department of agriculture to collect information about the spread of the virus. The virus is spread by plant material.

The virus has no ill effects on humans. But the virus leaves lesions on the fruit, making them hard to market.

Included in this issue of Grower & Marketer are pictures of what a virus infection looks like on the plant's leaves and fruit.

If growers suspect they have an infection, contact the local extension office immediately.

There is work under way to ensure orchards are compensated by the state and federal government for losses because of PPV. Fiscal year 2000 funding for PPV eradication amounts to $4.7 million — $3.7 million for program operating costs and $1 million for tree replacement.

More information is available from your local extension office.

Following are photos identifying symptoms of PPV on trees. Many symptoms may not be visible until quite some time after actual infection.

customers to ask themselves if it is worth the extra effort to go to the farm to get their berries.

You should not be harvesting berries with white tips, because this indicates an immature berry. If in doubt, taste a few berries and decide if the berries taste as good as is possible. If you have a pick-your-own operation, you should also educate your customers about the advantages of harvesting fully-ripened berries. They may only be familiar with what they see in the market and thus harvest their berries with white tips. Educate your customers about the advantages of a fully ripened berry and chances are they will return to your farm again.

One disadvantage to harvesting your berries more mature is a decrease in shelf life. You will need to handle these mature berries carefully to prevent damage. You will also need to keep the berries as cool as possible before they are sold. Start by harvesting as early in the morning as you can (but after any dew on the berries has dried). Keeping your strawberry fields weed- and disease-free should also help increase the shelf life of your fruit.

Apply fungicides, especially during wet weather, to reduce the development of gray mold. This disease is a major factor in postharvest berry rotting. Always follow the label directions regarding the PHI for your crop. Controlling gray mold during flowering can reduce the amount of this fungus in your fields during harvest. So plan carefully now for fruit quality at harvest.

New And Safer Insecticides

The current review of pesticides by the EPA has caused the loss of some materials we previously used for pest control in the field and may result in the loss of additional materials in the future.

However, there are several new insecticides introduced recently that should take the place of these lost materials and be safer to use as well. These newer, safer materials are often referred to as 'biorational' pesticides.

But what does this mean? Pesticides affect their target organism in different ways, depending upon the chemistry of the material. With many of the older pesticides, the way an insect was affected by a particular chemical was the same as it would affect a human. Thus these materials were considered fairly toxic.

However, some of the newer insecticides target specific biological systems in insects that are not present in humans. One example would be the molting system of an insect. By targeting systems that are not present in humans or other mammals, these new insecticides are considered safer and termed "biorational." This has helped speed up the registration process at the EPA.

Sometimes this selectivity can be even more specific, such as for a certain group of insects. While this is beneficial to you, your workers and the environment in general, it also means that you will need to more carefully monitor your fields for insects.

In the past, many of the insecticides used eliminated a large group of pests that may have been found in your crop. However, the newer materials may selectively remove some of the pests but leave others unaffected. You will need to scout your fields to be sure that you have controlled the pest(s) that were present in your crop. So while you are gaining safer materials to use, you will need to monitor your fields more carefully.

Overall, these new chemicals will be beneficial since they will improve worker safety and reduce the ecological impacts from crop production. I also believe that they will improve crop production because growers will be observing their crops more closely and hopefully spotting any potential problems earlier. However, always remember that these materials are still pesticides and, therefore, be sure to read the label and follow the instructions for usage and safety instructions.

Fungicide Resistance Management

Just as for insecticides, there are some new fungicides available for use on vegetables and fruit.

One group of new fungicides is the "strobilurins," which research and grower experience have shown to be very effective in controlling diseases. The strobilurin products now labeled on some vegetables include Quadris and Flint. Abound is a product labeled for various fruit and nut crops.

One reason that these materials are so effective is that they have some systemic activity, meaning that they actually move into plant tissues. However, a disadvantage of this type of activity is that diseases tend to develop resistance to these materials. A good example of this is Benlate resistance of diseases on fruits and vegetables.

Because of this potential problem, the companies that sell these products have developed usage guidelines for resistance management. Dr. Alan MacNab, vegetable disease specialist at Penn State, reports that there is no resistance to strobilurins in the U.S. but that there is already resistance outside North America.

Therefore, he reminds farmers to follow these guidelines. Resistance management strategies include alternating strobilurin materials with other effective materials and limiting the number of strobilurin applications per season.

Information on these guidelines will be included on all new labels, but some products do not have the new label information yet. The new guidelines are listed below. Be sure to follow these to help reduce the risk of vegetable diseases developing resistance to these new effective fungicides.

- Cucurbits. (1) No more than one application before alternation to an unrelated fungicide that is effective in controlling the causal fungus and (2) no more than four total applications per season.
- Potatoes. (1) No more than one application before alternation to an unrelated fungicide that is effective in controlling the causal fungus and (2) no more than six total applications per season.
- Tomatoes. (1) For late blight, no more than one application before alternation to an unrelated fungicide that is effective in controlling the late blight fungus; (2) for all other diseases, no more than three sequential applications before alternation to an unrelated fungicide that is effective in controlling the causal fungus; and (3) no more than five total applications per season.

NOTE: The sequential and totals reflect total strobilurin applications (at this time, both Quadris and Flint for vegetables). Therefore, if Flint is used for two applications on cucurbits, only two additional sprays can be made, regardless of whether they be Quadris or Flint. Likewise, if Quadris is used for two applications on cucurbits, only two additional sprays can be made, regardless of whether they are Flint or Quadris.

Quarryville Growers' Market Expands

QUARRYVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — The Quarryville Growers' Market opened for business for the season here one week ago today.

The market, open every Saturday through October, is located at Good's Store at the corner of Rt. 222 and Rt. 372. The market features vegetables, fruit, cut flowers, baked goods, bedding plants, perennials, and nursery stock. The market accepts Women, Infants, and Children (WIC) Program checks.

The market, five years old, continues to expand, focusing on its "we grow what we sell" philosophy. A new baker has been added to the market, and the market numbers 12 vendors.

"Being a growers' market means you are buying from the ones who grow it, locally, never shipped in, and always the highest quality we can provide," said Linda Boyer of Lambert Farm, Narvon. "Here you will find friendly service, locally grown products, and always fresh, fresh, fresh."

For information about the market or signing up as a vendor, call (717) 806-1997.

It Takes Just A Kernel Of Skill To Grow Great Sweet Corn

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Driving around Pennsylvania's back roads to find the perfect ear of sweet corn practically qualifies as a state sport, but a vegetable expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences said backyard gardeners also can grow sweet and tasty ears without much trouble.

"Many sweet corn varieties are resistant to most major corn diseases," said Pete Ferretti, professor of vegetable crops. "Also, in a backyard garden you can walk through the corn and pick off pests. Most corn pests are more interested in acres of corn than they are a garden plot."

Ferretti said Pennsylvania's temperate climate is perfectly suited for growing sweet corn.

Pennsylvania ranks fourth nationally in sweet corn production. In addition, sweet corn thrives in well-drained soils that hold water well, characteristics that describe much of the state's arable soil.

Ferretti said sweet corn is a popular food item primarily in the U.S. Most European, African, and Asian countries grow field corn to feed livestock and poultry or to make cornmeal, which is used for polenta, tortillas, mealy meal, breads, and other products.

"Sweet corn was developed from maize, which is native to the Americas and been cultivated in Central America since 3500 B.C.," Ferretti explained. Seed companies have sold sweet corn varieties since the early 1800s, but they really became popular as garden crops in the 1960s with the development of a very popular sweet variety called Silver Queen.

All sweet corn varieties are grown from seed and can be planted in most of Pennsylvania from about May 15 to July 1, depending upon whether varieties are early-season or late-season. "To enjoy sweet corn throughout the growing season, gardeners should make multiple plantings of early, main season, and late-maturing varieties," Ferretti said.

Ferretti recommends dedicating at least a 5-foot by 5-foot square of soil for corn, a plot capable of producing about 16 corn plants or around 30 edible ears. "A square plot is ideal because corn is pollinated by the wind and plants are more likely to receive adequate wind flow in a square than in a long row," he said.

Seeds should be planted 1 inch deep about every 4 inches in rows 16 inches apart. As the plants appear, Ferretti recommends pulling out the less vigorous plants. "Ideally, you should have about 16 inches of space between each remaining plant, which allows for good pollination and space to grow."

Ferretti said corn attracts a wide variety of pests, including corn borers, corn earworms, armyworms, Japanese beetles and corn rootworms. Home gardeners can use Sevin, an all-purpose garden insecticide, or cover the crop with fine mesh row covers. "The row covers will have to be removed when corn tassels appear so the plants can pollinate," he said. "In a small plot, most people can control pests by walking through and removing insects — unless your plot is next to a farmer's giant cornfield."

Ferretti said growing your own corn is the best way to ensure fresh, sweet-tasting ears. When sweet corn is picked, it immediately starts to convert its sugar content to starch and loses aroma and vitamins. "Corn tastes best when you start the water boiling on the stove and then go out and pick a few ears," Ferretti laughs. "But, if you put the ears in a plastic bag and refrigerate immediately after picking, most varieties will retain good quality for about five days."

Wissert To Florist Directors

ALFRED, N.Y. — Joan Wissert, assistant professor and chair, Agriculture and Horticulture Department, Alfred State College, was recently elected to the Associated Florists of Greater Rochester, Inc., board of directors.

This group works throughout the year to promote the floral industry. It is the last remaining independent (non-wire service) floral association in western New York. The group's most recent project is GardenScape 2000, greater Rochester's floral and garden show.

Wissert's election marks the first time in the organization's history that a college program has been invited to become a member.

Strawberry Picking

The farm includes 260 acres in corn, used to feed the steers, and about 130 acres of potatoes, managed by Paul's son, Ernie.

The farm includes another 60 acres in small grain, including wheat, and soybeans.

Together the family cares for about 3-4 acres of strawberries. The Masts have been growing strawberries since 1984.

Then, Paul said he had planned to establish a pick-your-own (PYO) farm. He planted five acres in the beginning, but found out the PYO didn't have a large enough customer base.

In 1986, the farm stand was constructed. From there, sales improved. The Masts have also sold strawberries to local grocery stores.

Mast noted the huge amount of traffic along Rt. 23. The good part is the "ridge" that separates acres helps keep the berries high, out of the valleys, and away from frost damage.

The Masts use conventional matted rows bedded with either wheat or rye straw.

Springtime proves best for discing up ground and replanting. At bloom, a hoe is used to control thistle and dandelion.

Picking begins around the first of June or near Memorial Day Weekend, Mast said, depending on the weather. Picking continues until about the third week in June.

Jim Groff, field manager, noted that the challenge was dealing with the farm labor. Helping train more than a dozen seasonal workers to pick the rows correctly and package the material can prove frustrating.

"Getting them to show up on time, ready to pick, is the worst part," said Groff. "Watching who does what, getting the picking right — those are challenges."

Also, the timeliness of harvest is critical. "If it's six o'clock and it's time to set up, and labor is not available," said Groff, "then we have to make some phone calls."

The stand was open from 8 a.m. to noon every day except Sunday. Sometimes it was open until 5 p.m. if the harvest was good. Friday and Saturday were the busiest days.

"You do the best you can," Mast said. "There is no formula."

Strawberries are harvested in quarts and four-quart baskets. Groff plants about 15,000 plants per acre.

How much for the berries? The Masts charge $3 per quart or about $11 per basket.

Overall, it was easier to pick the strawberries to sell at the stand, though the Masts still allow PYO if requested.

This year, early hot weather started some blooms early, especially the early variety, Early Glow, which experienced moderate frost damage. But the stand looks good.

The new plantings this year are equipped with trickle irrigation lines. The drip lines will help ensure a prolonged growing season.

Last year, at the end of the season, growers experienced what many consider the worst drought in state history. Groff noted that overhead irrigation was used. Though it softened and scalded some berries, the flush produced berries longer — so the Masts could extend the season a week or two.

However, the renovated berries that didn't get a soaking irrigation didn't recover as well.

At the end of the season, the strawberries are mowed. Renovation takes place. After renovation, according to soil recommendations, fertilizer is applied.

Last year, Paul Mast noted,

The Masts use a few bee colonies to help with pollination. The bees are a key factor in improving fruit set.

The past year, Mast noted, it was easy to move strawberries because of problems with the crop in California. There is still good demand for strawberries this year, even from California.

produce is sold as fresh fruit. The remaining 40 percent is sold for processing. Although some of their fresh produce is sold in the farm market, a portion of it is sold wholesale to clients in Iowa, Vermont, and Florida. The remaining portion is sold to Rice Fruit Company. The processing fruit is sold to Knouse Foods and Motts, USA.

The farm market is open from early April through December each year. Along with offering their homegrown fruits, the Hollabaughs also sell other local produce, preserves, baking mixes, and other gift items.

Originally opened in 1955 when the Hollabaughs first purchased the farm, the market has grown "by leaps and bounds" over the years.

"It seems like every two years we add on to the market," said Kay Hollabaugh. "This year we've purchased an observation hive and will have an education room where people can learn more about the importance role bees have in fruit growing."

The Hollabaughs have emphasized education as a business priority for several years. They hosted their first school tour five or six years ago. Each year around 1,200 school children come to tour the farm and market.

"We take them out on a tractor and wagon and talk to them about fruit growing," said Hollabaugh. "We let them pick five apples, and then we bring them back to the market to try cider samples. We also take them into the cold storage room and explain cold storage to them."

Hollabaugh Brothers Fruit Farm and Market features 500 acres of apples, peaches, plums, pears, and other fruit. Several thousands of people travel to the farm each year to learn more about fruit growing and its role in our food supply.

Hollabaugh Market has grown "by leaps and bounds" since its opening in 1955. The market started out in this little shed on the opposite of the road from today's farm market.

The observation hive will be arriving at the Hollabaugh's market in June, just in time for the fall tour schedule.

"The kids will be able to sit on bleachers and watch a working bee hive," said Hollabaugh. "We can talk to them about the importance of bees and discuss problems we have with animals and pests."

The Hollabaughs charge $3.25 per person to give the tours. Along with conducting school tours, they also host tours for the Elderhostel group, which is a group of retired people who travel around the country for education purposes.

"Basically they travel to an area and spend a week there learning about the culture," said Hollabaugh. The group comes to Adams County to explore the Gettysburg Battlefield, and they visit the Hollabaugh's fruit farm to learn about fruit growing.

Family tours are also available by appointment. "We need to have at least 15 people to host a tour," said Hollabaugh. "We host the tours mainly for education purposes.

Adams County Fruit Farm And Market Emphasizes Ag Education

"We also like to put a face with the produce they are purchasing," she said. "When they purchase their next apple, they can remember the person who gave them the tour."

Many of the school children travel from the Mechanicsburg and Harrisburg areas. However, local children also come to tour the farm.

"It amazes me how little these children know about agriculture and fruit growing," said Hollabaugh. "It's really important to get local kids to see where their food comes from."

Another way the Hollabaughs educate the community is by hiring young people to work at the market.

"We had a girl working for us since she was 14 who is now a sophomore in college," said Hollabaugh. "This year will be the first summer she hasn't worked on the farm, and she said she would really miss it. If she wouldn't have been exposed to fruit farming here, she would have never known about it."

The Hollabaughs stress customer service and homegrown produce in their marketing tactics. They emphasize that customers are coming to a working farm to buy their produce. They require their employees to keep a smile on their face and to be willing to help customers with their questions and needs.

"Now, with the education room, we can take customers who have a lot of questions back there and show them the observation hive to explain fruit growing," said Hollabaugh. "Customers know that when they come here, they're coming to growers who can answer their questions."

The Hollabaughs advertise their market and its events through direct mail, along with newspaper advertisements and cable television ads.

"We have a database of about 5,000 people that we mail direct mail pieces to several times throughout the year," said Hollabaugh.

Two years ago the Hollabaughs launched their own Website, www.hollabaughbros.com, which allows their customers to place orders on line.

"The website has really helped to expand our gift box business," said Hollabaugh. They sell tray-packed gift boxes in 10 different varieties.

"Our claim to fame is that we grow everything that is in the box," said Hollabaugh. "A lot of area businesses order them for their customers and clients."

The Hollabaughs host fruit festivals to bring in new customers and educate them about fruit growing. In August, they conduct a two-day peach festival. Then, during the second weekend in October to tie in with the National Apple Harvest Festival in Ardentsville, they host an apple festival.

This year will be the 10th year for the peach festival. "When I became actively involved in the farm, it seemed that people just naturally came here because it was apple country," said Hollabaugh. "But I wanted them to know that it was peach country, too."

The event started as a Sunday event and has grown to a two-day event with live entertainment, free wagon tours, and a variety of peach samples. The festival usually draws several thousand people.

"We don't charge for either of our festivals," said Hollabaugh. "But we do accept donations for the Hospice of the Good Shephard in Gettysburg. That has gone over surprisingly well with our customers."

This year the Hollabaughs will be part of the State Horticulture Association of Pennsylvania's (SHAP) annual summer orchard tour July 18-19. The tour features different farms and facilities in Pennsylvania with fruit growers from Pennsylvania, Maryland, and other states invited on the tour.

The Hollabaughs will also be the hosts of this year's Adams County Farm City Festival Sept. 9. This event typically draws 1,000 people and educates visitors about agriculture practices in Adams County.

As current ag committee chairperson for the Gettysburg/Adams Area Chamber of Commerce, Hollabaugh was approached by the Farm City Day committee early this year.

"We're still in the planning stages," said Hollabaugh. "But we're planning to have wagon rides, tours, and apple picking. The committee will also be bringing in animals to educate guests about animal agriculture.

"Whenever we get someone in our market who is really interested in learning more, I just talk and talk," said Hollabaugh. "I get really excited about educating our community. Our customers know they can trust us — we'll give them honest answers about our growing practices and any food safety issues that arise."

Irrigation Supply Company: 1999 A 'Great' Year

MECHANICSBURG (Cumberland Co.) — Last year's drought brought a couple of observations on sales figures for one irrigation supply company: "fabulous" and "great," said Jay Watson, president of Watson Irrigation and Contractor Supply, Inc.

The company, starting its eighth year, employs four full time. Watson supplies residential lawn sprinkling and water gardening systems to landscapers. The company also supplies reels and center pivots and portable irrigation systems to the agricultural market.

Watson also supplies dust control equipment used to wet down roads in construction and other sites.

About 70 percent of Watson's market is in residential and commercial turf management companies, with the remainder in agricultural supplies, noted Watson. Watson handles Hunter, Toro, and Rainbird for residential irrigation.

Nelson Big Gun sprinklers and Rainbird sprinklers are the major agricultural sprinklers, according to Watson.

The company distributes equipment made by Kifco Ag-Rain, Havana, Ill. and Hobbs Reel-Rain, Suffolk, Va., for agricultural irrigation needs.

The company services about 300 customers all within a 100-mile radius of Harrisburg, said Watson. The largest sales volume includes Toro irrigation equipment for landscapers.

Last year proved memorable for the company, with good sales throughout the drought for both aspects of the business. Sales slowed only when lawn watering restrictions went into place. The restrictions "definitely affected everybody's business as far as irrigation," Watson said.

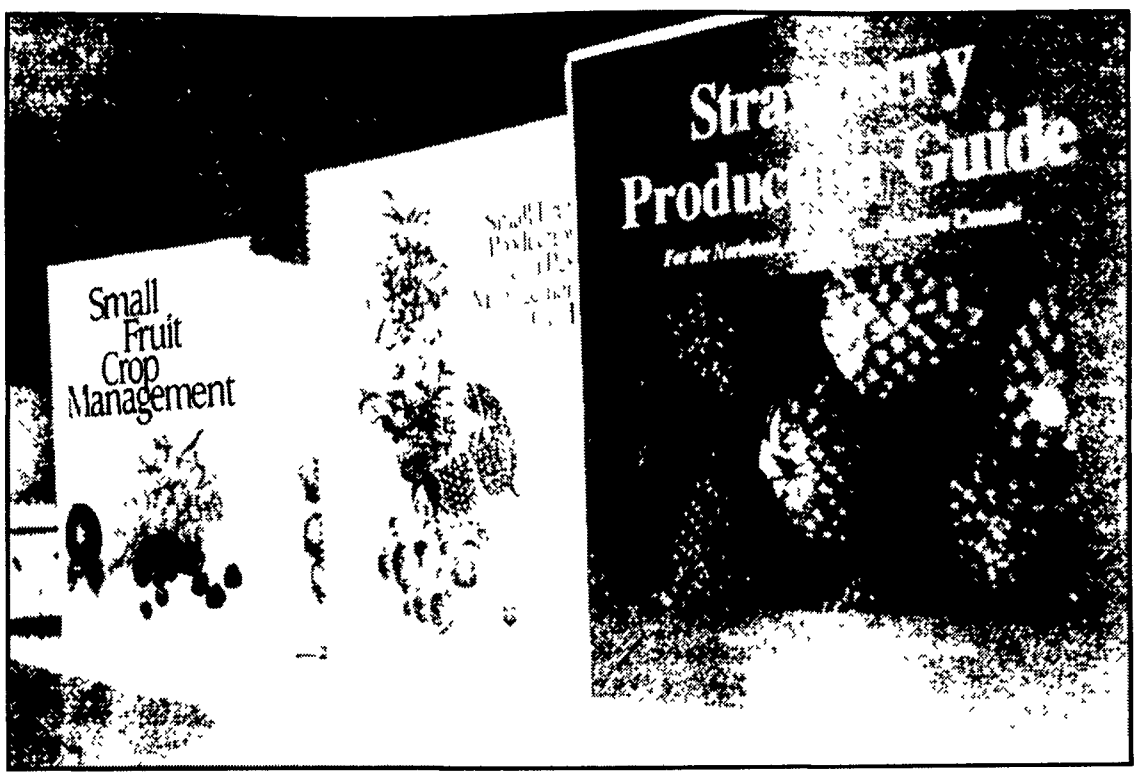
At Strawberry Renovation, Bud Set, Fertilizer And Moisture Are Critical



Ressler said there are several production guides available. They include, from left, The Small Fruit Crop Management Book, ed. by Gene J. Galletta and David G. Himelrick, from Prentice Hall, 1990; The Small Fruit Production and Pest Management Guide, available from Penn State (to be updated soon), for $10; and The NRAES Strawberry Production Guide, covering the Northeast, Midwest, and East, available for $45.

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff

MORGANTOWN (Berks Co.) — When it comes to growing that huge, lush, red strawberry, too much — or too little — soil moisture can make or break yields.

Many growers sometimes fail to realize that bud formation, from mid-August to September, provides the fruit that will be harvested the following spring. According to Leon Ressler, Lancaster County extension agent, it is critical to renovate, supply nitrogen, and ensure the plants get enough water at bud formation, which can greatly affect next season's yield.

Moisture is crucial to the strawberry plant, Ressler noted, since the roots only extend to about six inches beneath the soil surface.

Another critical time, Ressler noted, is at time of fruit enlarging. About 1-2 inches of rainfall per week is necessary at this critical time in the late spring, before harvest.

Last summer's devastating drought affected many who didn't irrigate. But the extreme heat was worse — it literally caused the strawberries to shut down. The July heat, Ressler said, with several 100-degree days, was particularly hard on strawberry growers "because it happened after renovation," he said.

Though overhead irrigation did work to lower daytime temperatures, at night, temperatures were still high and even by morning, the "fields felt like mid-afternoon," Ressler said.

But a combination of cool and wet weather can be detrimental for the fruit. In the fruit sizing stage, strawberries prefer cool and dry weather to set carbohydrates and to enlarge.

Irrigation pays off for conventional growers. Lancaster County experienced a freeze on April 13 this year, when temperatures dropped to 26 degrees. Those with overhead irrigation simply used the nighttime water sprays to insulate the fruit from frost and freeze damage.

In the season, too much rain can cause gray mold to develop. The fungus, which starts as a blossom infection, shows up as a gray powder on the fruit.

The plasticulture systems use raised beds with the strawberries growing on a plastic mulch with trickle irrigation under the mulch. During extended rainy weather, the fruit can become soft from lying on wet plastic for lengthy periods of time.

Conventional growers use a straw bedding to ensure good drainage when irrigating and to keep the fruit clean.

The good thing about the abundant spring rains was that water supplies were recharged. Those supplies prove ideal for growers in years such as last.

At Strawberry Renovation

When selecting a site for planting strawberries, growers should choose one with good drainage and one that is not low, where it would tend to get frost damage.

Also, applying a fungicide to label rates at the critical bloom time, from April through May, will help control gray mold. "The mold starts in the blossom," said Ressler. "The critical time for application is during the bloom period."

For the spores to activate, the bloom has to be wet for 6-8 hours in order for the mold to start. If irrigating with overhead equipment, limit the times during the day, from 10 a.m.-2 p.m., so the plants can dry off. Irrigating at night can spell real problems in trying to control the fungus.

The new strawberry plasticulture is in use by a fifth of the growers in the county. Use is growing because, under the system, drip lines supply adequate moisture; the fruit remains dirt-free; and time between planting and harvesting is narrowed, thus creating faster and more efficient returns on investment.

The shortfalls to the use of a plastic mulch-based system: it works well for one season and has to be replaced. However, with proper management, the plastic mulch system can be maintained, with pruning and renovation, like a conventional site and provide fruit for several seasons.

Varieties that are suitable to the use of plastic must be used. Special management is necessary to adopt the Northeast varieties of strawberries to plasticulture.

(Ressler noted that the Northeast varieties common to growers, including Jewel and Early Glow, work well in a conventional matted row with straw bed. California varieties are more adapted to the use of drip irrigation underneath plastic mulch.)

Conventional rows should be 12 inches on 36- 44-inch centers. Plastic, two-row systems can measure 36 inches wide, set on a single raised bed with the beds on 5-6 foot centers.

In an ideal conventional system, after harvest, herbicide must be applied to control weeds. Then, using a rototiller, the rows must be renovated so that runners will stay within the row. A preemergence herbicide should be applied after rototilling to provide residual weed control.

Fertilizer must be added according to soil test recommendations.

Ressler recommends about 50-60 pounds of nitrogen per acre at renovation and another 20 pounds per acre in late August or early September.

Ideal soil pH for strawberries is 6-6.5. The plant uses more potash than phosphorous, so it is critical, Ressler noted, to watch for regular soil test recommendations.

As for the "ideal" year, a grower can look for good moisture at blossom set, 1- 2 inches of rain one night per week, plenty of sunshine and cool temperatures, and proper soil fertility.

With those conditions on a conventional system, growers can probably harvest 4,000-5,000 quarts per acre. Occasionally, with ideal conditions, 8,000 quarts per acre can be possible, as long as there is a "good stand, no frost damage, a good high-yielding strawberry variety, adequate moisture, and control of plant pests," Ressler said.

Of particular concern is the tarnished plant bug, which can feed during bloom time. Proper pesticides are needed to control potential plant damage.

The issue of labor requirements to harvest the fruit can prove critical to the grower. For new growers, starting a pick-your-own (PYO) operation can take time to market the business and build up clientele. Per acre, PYO can generate good revenue, since there are few labor considerations.

For those starting who want to harvest and sell the strawberries at farm stand or auction, conventional rows can prove less expensive. For plastic rows, costs can rise to about $2,000 per acre. "Fumigation with methyl bromide alone can cost up to $1,700 per acre," Ressler said. Fungicide applications can run up to $150 per acre.

And having bee colonies can help in plant pollination and fruit set. Though the strawberry plant is self-pollinating, growers have shown that bee pollination will help get a better crop.

Site considerations should be made. Growers should not plant in a valley, which can be subject to frost damage. Use a good, well-drained site with good tilth, and plant the bareroot stock in April. The blossoms are snapped off the first year to ensure the plant's energy goes to the runners to develop good plant size and fruit-bearing ability the next season. Cultivate and train the runners to stay in the row.

For those wanting a plasticulture system, plant in late August or early September. With this system, plugs are inserted through the black plastic rows with a waterwheel planter. When the blooms appear in the spring, after fungus and other pests are managed, the fruit can be ready to harvest.

A great benefit to plasticulture strawberries is the "quick return on investment," said Ressler.

Whatever system is used, growers should start small, perhaps with a quarter acre or so. Also, when using plastic, disposal issues are key — the plastic must be sent to the solid waste management authorities in the area.

"It should not be buried or burned on the farm," Ressler noted. "Open burning of plastic waste is a major source of pollution which can easily be eliminated."

For those switching from tobacco to alternative crops, strawberries can provide some of the best income. But they are perishable, noted Ressler, which means they have to be marketed promptly.

Ressler said there are several production guides available. They include:

- The NRAES Strawberry Production Guide, covering the Northeast, Midwest, and East, available for $45.
- The "Commercial Berry Production and Pest Management Guide 2000-2001," available from Penn State, for $10.
- The Small Fruit Crop Management Book, ed. by Gene J. Galletta and David G. Himelrick, Prentice Hall, 1990.

Beautiful Flower Garden Begins With The Soil

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — If you're planning a flower garden this summer, start getting your soil in shape now. Soil preparation can save you time, labor and money as well as reward you with beautiful plants.

"Preparing the soil is the most important step in gardening," said Robert Nuss, professor of ornamental horticulture in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. "Have your soil tested this spring, and use the test results and recommendations as a guide."

A soil test measures nutrient amounts and pH, or about two weeks. Results include levels of potassium, calcium, phosphorus and magnesium, along with the soil's pH. Also included are recommendations for the kinds and amounts of fertilizer to apply and how much lime — if any — to add to the soil.

"If you're planning to grow rhododendron, azalea, laurel, or other plants that prefer acidic soil, you may need to apply a chemical such as sulfur, which lowers pH," said Nuss. "Apply no more than the recommended amount."

Till the recommended materials about 5 inches into the soil. While working the soil, remove stones, sod clumps, weeds and debris.

"Incorporate several inches of organic matter," said Nuss. "There's little danger of adding too much. Composted kitchen scraps, well-rotted manures, lawn clippings, and decayed plant material all are good forms of organic matter. They help retain water and supply some nutrients for all plants set into the soil."

Add 2 to 3 inches of organic mulch on top of the soil around your plants. Mulch helps keep soil moist, prevents erosion, discourages weeds, and builds up the soil's organic matter. "Mulch also tends to be more attractive than bare soil in an ornamental garden," said Nuss. "It keeps mud from splashing on your flowers and gives the ground's surface uniform color and texture."

Several kinds of mulch are available at garden centers, including wood bark chips, shredded bark and peat. If you use grass clippings, leaves or well-decayed compost, periodically loosen them with a hand cultivator or hoe to prevent surface crusting.

When your plants begin to flower, use a high-nitrogen fertilizer on the soil about 6 inches away from the base of each plant. Follow product application rates. This will enhance flowering and give plants a boost for the rest of the summer. "If you fertilize too soon, however, you will delay the plants' maturity and decrease the number of flowers," said Nuss. "Wait until the first flowers open."

Finally, retest your flower garden's fertility and pH levels each year for several seasons. If reports remain similar, you can reduce sampling to every three to four years. "Nutrient levels and pH gradually change over time," said Nuss. "It's important to keep monitoring the soil to keep levels optimum."

Soil test kits may be purchased for $6 at Penn State Cooperative Extension offices.

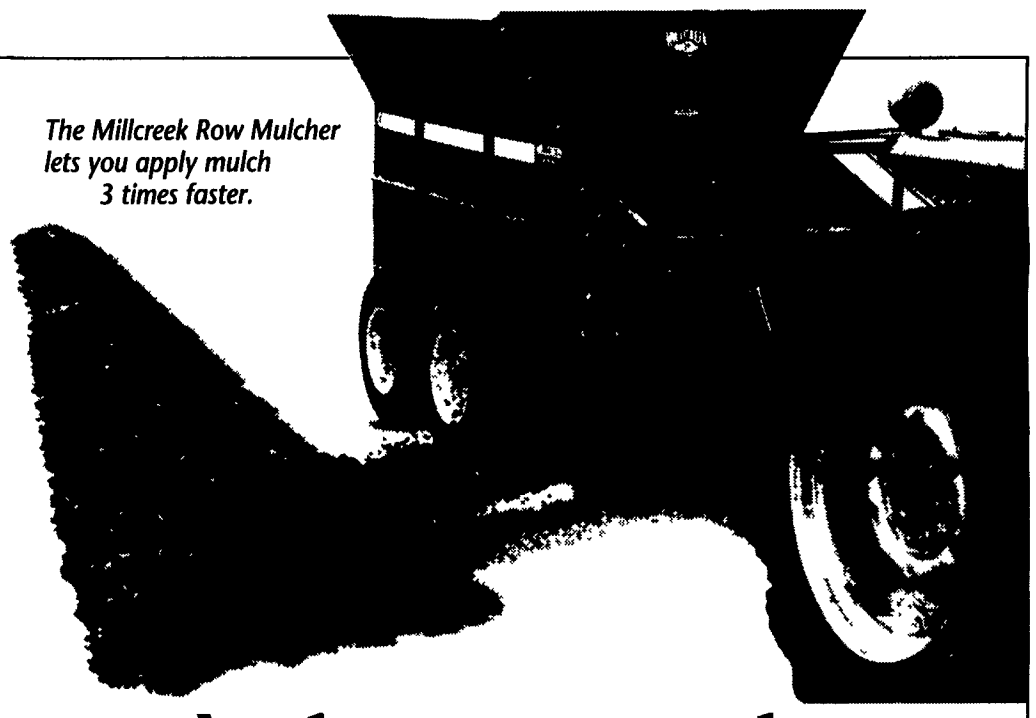
Farmers' Market Celebrates 60th

SCRANTON (Lackawanna Co.) — Co-Operative Farmers' Market recently celebrated its 60th anniversary here.

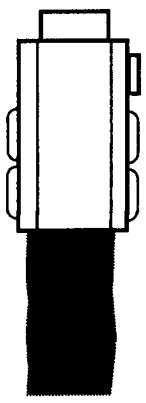
The market dates back to Aug. 1, 1939, with opening ceremonies at the Scranton Athletic Field parking lot (now Memorial Stadium).

The cooperative expanded 10 years later, purchasing four acres from the city of Scranton itself. The market is the only seasonal market of its kind in northeastern Pennsylvania, noted the organizers. It is solely owned and operated by farmers.



The Millcreek Row Mulcher lets you apply mulch 3 times faster.

Apply compost and organic mulch to any row crop automatically



YOUR CHOICE
Millcreek Row Mulchers also let you drop spread in the center of rows.

From tree fruit to vegetable beds, from bramble crops to vineyards, organic mulch and compost can reduce chemical input for weed suppression, retain soil moisture, and improve soil fertility by adding organic matter to sandy and clay soils.

Now Millcreek eliminates the costly labor needed for organic mulch and compost application. The remarkable new Millcreek Row Mulcher works with all types of organic material, and even lets you adjust the depth and width of the mulch rows from 12" to 120" wide, from 1/2" to 6" deep.

Starting under $6500, no other machine compares when it comes to capabilities, versatility, and cost effectiveness. Rugged construction. Six sizes, from 3.4 to 20 cubic yard capacity. Custom designs. Call today for a free color brochure, or to discuss your specific needs.

Time To Check For Strawberry Problems

Spring is the best time of year to check your strawberry plants for a number of problems. If you have patches that are doing poorly, dig up some plants from these areas and slice through the main roots lengthwise.

One diagnostic symptom of red stele (Phytophthora root rot) shows up when the soil is cool, and becomes less obvious as the soil warms. If the plants have this disease, there will be a reddish discoloration in the center (the stele) of the root.

Also, check for root weevil larvae (small white grubs) in the top inches of soil. Slice through the crown of the plant, too. You may find tunnels made by grubs or the grubs themselves.

The crown should be creamy white throughout. If you notice a brown or reddish discoloration, the plants may have been cold-injured, though some diseases also cause discolorations of the crown.

Starting before bloom, check weekly for tarnished plant bugs (they cause button-berry) and clipper. Sample in a V-shape across the field. For tarnished plant bugs, tap at least 30 flower clusters over a white plate.

More than 0.25 nymphs per cluster before 10 percent bloom or more than 0.5 nymphs per cluster during mid to late bloom are the thresholds for a spray application. Insecticide sprays during bloom are to be avoided if at all possible because of risk to pollinators. If no tarnished plant bug nymphs are found until mid-bloom, delay spray application until after bloom to protect pollinators.

For clipper, check 5 to 10 - 2-foot sections of row. An average of 1 clipped bud per foot of row is the threshold for control. If your planting borders woods, check some additional sections in the border rows near the woods. Sprays of these border rows may be sufficient.

Options For Deer Control In Vegetable, Strawberry Crops

Steve Bogash,
Commercial Horticulture Agent
Blair County

There is little doubt that in order to profitably grow high value crops such as strawberries and vegetables that some pre-planning for deer control is a must. The ever-increasing number of deer in the commonwealth poses a severe threat to the profitability of any produce operation.

First a few deer facts:

Deer will eat anything if they are hungry enough. There was a time when the author believed that garlic was completely out of the question, but hungry deer will even take an occasional bite of garlic.

A little deer math: start with a hypothetical herd of 24 deer eight are bucks and 16 are does). Now use some method of effective hunting: six bucks and eight does are harvested during hunting season. This leaves two bucks and eight does for this coming breeding season. Each doe has 1.7 fawns on average in good habitat. We now go into next season with 23 deer and this is after killing more than half of the herd.

No amount of deer control is effective long term without intensive herd population management as ever increasing numbers of deer will overwhelm any barriers we create.

Repellents don't work, at least for very long. There are numerous repellents on the market. Most will work for a short period, but seldom for more than 2-3 weeks and most need to be reapplied regularly. Hungry animals have been shown to pay little attention to repellents.

Some methods of deer control worth consideration:

•Radio-collared dogs. Cornell evaluated in one research project a greatly beefed-up dog radio collar system called off-limits. This system has been shown effective on areas as large as 30-50 acres per enclosure depending on terrain, dog's abilities, and desired control levels. Since dogs are highly territorial, they essentially stake out the area as their own and will chase any varmints or deer from inside the antennae area. Selection and training of the dogs as well as the placement of shelter, food and water sources is imperative for this to work well. Dogs that are not used to people may be a problem in "pick your own" operations. Some dogs tire of the chase without ever catching the deer and quit chasing them. Cost: approximately $4,000 for 30-50 acres.

•Full-height barrier fences. Nothing beats a full height (8-10 foot) fence for deer control. If you can afford to surround a planting with a barrier that deer cannot get over, under or through you've got good deer control. The big problem with this method is short and long-term cost. Initial installation is expensive as even inexpensive plastic mesh materials can run $1 per foot, 10-12 foot posts are not cheap and annual maintenance can be time consuming.

•Slant fence. Slant fence systems using high-tensile wire and an electric charger are quite effective, as deer do not readily jump over a barrier with depth. This five foot tall fence is up to eight feet deep. Drawbacks to this system are the initial cost of installation and the need to maintain a weed and grass free strip under the fence.

•Low-cost two-wire electric fence. Baited, low-cost, polywire fencing can provide highly effective deer control with minimal capital outlay. A typical polywire fence of this type has two wires on fiberglass posts set at 20-30 foot spacing. The top wire is 30-36 inches off the ground and the low wire is 18-20 inches off the ground. Pieces of aluminum flashing that resemble pup tents are crimped along the top wire at 10-15 foot intervals. Peanut butter is then smeared under these tents. The wires are charged and when the deer come to investigate the

International Conference Focuses On Plastics In Agriculture

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Farmers, horticulture industry workers, plastics manufacturers and suppliers, educators, and other interested professionals from both the U.S. and abroad can see firsthand how new uses for plastics have transformed agriculture at "Plasticulture 2000," the 15th International and 29th National Agricultural Plastics Congress, Sept. 23-27 at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center in Hershey.

"This congress is a golden opportunity to see and hear about the latest top cutting-edge research and methods in plasticulture," said Michael Orzolek, program chair and professor of vegetable crops in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. "You also can see active field demonstrations of machinery, crops grown in plasticulture systems and five special tours."

The congress is hosted by Penn State and sponsored by the American Society for Plasticulture and the Comite International des Plastiques en Agriculture. A three- to four-day tour of farms and agribusinesses in New Jersey is scheduled before the conference opens on Sept. 23.

Sponsored by Rutgers University, and starting in Newark, N.J., attendees will see production agriculture farms using drip irrigation, plastic film mulch, and greenhouse technologies. As the tour approaches Hershey, visits to historic sites near Philadelphia also are scheduled.

The congress opens Sept. 23, with a general assembly. On Sunday, Sept. 24, attendees will hear a keynote speech on "Plasticulture in the Global Community" and four other plenary presentations on various elements of plasticulture. Later in the day, roundtable discussions will address drip irrigation, greenhouse technology, packaging technology, and plastic technology that will extend the growing season.

On Monday and Tuesday, Sept. 25-26, more than 80 researchers from the United States and various foreign countries will give research presentations on greenhouse production, row covers and high/low tunnels, use of plastics in vegetable, fruit and ornamental crop production, and plastics in packaging and livestock operations. Plastics disposal, reuse, and recycling also will be covered.

The conference includes an extensive trade show Sept. 26 and 27, according to William Lamont, program co-chair and Penn State associate professor of vegetable crops.

On the final day, Wednesday, Sept. 27, visitors can take one of five tours to agricultural businesses in central and southeast Pennsylvania. Tours will visit commercial fruit operations, vegetable operations, commercial greenhouses, ornamental nurseries, and businesses specializing in plastic packaging technology.

For more information on Plasticulture 2000, call The American Society for Plasticulture at (814) 238-7045 or visit the society's Website: http://www.plasticulture.org.

The highly visible polywire and peanut butter baits on a charged wire provide an effective deterrent to feeding inside the wire. This system is generally good on areas up to five acres. The baits must be maintained with fresh peanut butter every 2-4 weeks and care needs to be given in planning the location for the enclosure. Locating this psychological barrier in a long used deer thruway will not have any effect, as they will leap over the wires. This system is very inexpensive because the only costs are for fiberglass posts, polywire, a little miscellaneous hardware, peanut butter, and a charger. Solar-powered battery chargers can make this system completely portable to those areas on your farm with no power.

The concept with all electric fencing is to train the deer to stay out of an area. Start before your crop needs protection and maintain the fence. Don't turn it off during the time that you want protection because the deer will periodically test the wire and go through if the system is off. During high snow periods, your fence may become ineffective.

Planting, Nurturing Fruit Trees Requires Skill, Science

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Nowadays, in an era where the backyard fruit tree is often a vanishing memory, consumers might be justified in thinking fruit grows in supermarkets.

But a tree fruit expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences said homeowners armed with knowledge and an appetite for work can grow vigorous, tasty fruit.

"If you know your soil fertility, where to plant the tree, and the pollination requirements of the fruit tree or bush, you can reduce the need to use chemical controls for disease and insect pests," said Robert Crassweller, professor of tree fruit.

Crassweller explains that knowing where not to plant a fruit tree prevents years of disappointing fruit production.

The Planting Site

Every fruit tree must have plenty of sunlight in order to fuel fruit production. Crassweller recommends choosing a site that is in sunlight most or all of the day.

"The faster the plants dry off after rain or morning dew, the less chance they have to contract a disease," Crassweller said. "Rapid drying will reduce fungicide use."

Fruit trees also should be planted in areas with good drainage and some protection from winds. "Northern exposures delay flower development in the spring and can help to avoid the damage of late spring frosts," Crassweller said. "But, they tend to be colder. The best site has an eastern exposure."

Crassweller warns that homeowners should not plant near the root zone of a black walnut tree, which produces a natural herbicide called juglone that inhibits plant growth. He also warns that strawberries or bramble fruit should not be grown where tomatoes, peppers, eggplant, or potatoes have been grown in the past five years. "A soil fungus called Verticillium can live in plant debris from those vegetables and infect the fruit plants," he said.

If only a small space gets full sunlight, Crassweller suggests using dwarf fruit tree varieties or planting the varieties as a property screen or divider. "Currants and gooseberries are the only fruit crops that tolerate any shade at all," he said.

For drainage, Crassweller recommends observing standing water after a spring rain. If visible water remains after 24 hours, the soil is not well-drained.

Pollination

"Pollination transfers pollen from the male part of the flower to the female part of the same flower or another flower of the same variety," Crassweller said. "A plant that provides pollen to another variety is called a 'pollinizer.' In most cases bees are the pollinators."

Crassweller said a pollinating plant must have:

A bloom period overlapping that of the plant requiring pollination

Viable pollen

A location close to the variety to be pollinated.

Crassweller said homeowners should be aware of other pollination factors. Temperatures below 60 degrees Fahrenheit will reduce bee flight. Temperatures above 85 degrees F will dry out flowers and prevent pollen from germinating.

"Other nectar-producing flowers can draw bees away from fruit plants, as can dandelions in early spring," Crassweller said. "Also, applying pesticides during blossoming will kill bees and other pollinating insects."

Plant Quality

Buy well-grown, heavily rooted plants that are at least one year old. Blueberry plants should be two years old. Crassweller says consumers should buy plants listed as "certified," "virus-tested" or "virus-indexed."

"Brambles and stone fruit plants are prone to viral infections in the nursery," he said. "Do not buy a bramble plant that is grown outside a nursery. All of these plants should be grown in a greenhouse in steam-sterilized soil to prevent disease."

Penn State Guide To Growing Fruit Goes Online

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Homeowners and amateur gardeners looking to sweeten their diets or slightly supplement their income can find helpful information at a new World Wide Website produced by Penn State's College of Agriculture Sciences.

"Small-Scale Fruit Production" (http://ssfruit.cas.psu.edu) is a comprehensive guide to growing fruit in Pennsylvania.

The Website offers backyard gardeners and hobby horticulturists detailed advice and instruction for growing apples, peaches, pears, plums, grapes, strawberries, blueberries, and cane fruit. The site, adapted from the 161-page Penn State publication "Small-Scale Fruit Production," is aimed at people who want to grow fruit on one acre or less, and who are not legally licensed to use pesticides.

"The guide presents state-of-the art production methods," said Robert Crassweller, professor of tree fruit. "Homeowners and hobbyists will be able to read and understand how to use alternative types of pest control — called integrated pest management by growers — to reduce pesticide use."

The Website offers fully searchable text and many sharply defined color photographs showing disease symptoms and examples of insect damage, as well as photos of many different varieties of fruit trees and plants.

The guide instructs consumers on topics from preparing the planting site to harvesting the bounty, while also addressing subjects such as pollination requirements for trees and other fruits, soil fertility, monthly management tips, how to plant fruit trees, control of wildlife damage, and pest control.

Crassweller said both the Website and publication list nursery sources for trees and small fruit plants, sources for wildlife control materials, and reference books for the home gardener.

"The online guide really gives consumers a complete understanding of how a fruit tree or plant functions as an entire production system," Crassweller said.

Web surfers also can find easy-to-use charts and tables detailing pest control and fruit management information.

The "Small-Scale Fruit Production Guide" is jointly produced by Penn State's departments of horticulture, entomology, plant pathology, agricultural, and biological engineering and the School of Forest Resources. The printed publication is available for $9 and can be ordered by calling the College of Agricultural Sciences Publications Distribution Center at (814) 865-6713.

Opportunity For Growers To Expand Markets

PHILADELPHIA — Pennsylvania Preferred, an initiative stemming from the annual ten-day The Book and The Cook Fair and Festival in Philadelphia, is hosting special events to increase awareness and business for growers of Pennsylvania products.

The first Pennsylvania Preferred event took place on March 2 and 3 and featured the products of eight specialty growers in Pennsylvania. Many of Philadelphia's acclaimed chefs had a chance to sample these quality products prepared by Chef Michael Bruno at the Sheraton Rittenhouse Square. The chefs also met with the growers of each product.

During the event, students from the Saint Joseph's Academy of Food Marketing were on hand to present an interim review of the marketing study. The study commissioned by The Book and The Cook with the support of a Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture matching grant for each of the participating growers.

As Pennsylvania Preferred "grows" into phase two of the project this fall, students from Saint Joseph's University will work with Pennsylvania growers to expand their markets within the Philadelphia restaurant community and high-end retail stores. A key element in this phase be a campaign for growers interested in branding their products and educating consumers.

Quality specialty produce growers in Pennsylvania are invited to participate in Pennsylvania Preferred. If you have a product that fits this description and if you have an interest in learning more about upcoming Pennsylvania Preferred events, contact The Book and The Cook at (215) 545-5353.

Farmers' Market Federation To Offer Transition Training

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — New York State's more that 230 farmers' markets provide an important marketing alternative for existing farmers seeking alternatives to existing farm enterprises, or for new farmers seeking to enter agriculture.

Farmers Markets offer low-cost access to consumers seeking to purchase locally grown products and yield farmers immediate cash through retail sales. They also provide an ideal low-risk "farmer-friendly" setting for testing out new farm enterprises and products, such as specialty crops and value-added farm products, that can strengthen and sustain a farm enterprise.

However, many farmers in need of marketing alternatives, have not taken advantage of the important economic opportunities offered by farmers' markets. This can be due to a number of factors, including farmers' unfamiliarity with the markets' potential for sales, their uncertainty about what products can be sold successfully, or their lack of knowledge of the direct marketing and merchandising practices needed to succeed at the markets. As a result, existing farms faced with economic uncertainty may be lost to agriculture when they could be revitalized and sustained through participation at farmers' markets.

The Farmers' Market Federation of New York is undertaking a new project aiming to eliminate the uncertainty that prevents farmers from taking advantage of the direct marketing opportunities of farmers' markets. Farmers wanting to transition their farming operation to include a direct marketing approach and those interested in starting out in farming will be encouraged to participate in this project.

As a first step, farm tours will be organized across the state, throughout the growing season. The tours will look at innovative production techniques, different niches such as herbs, pastured poultry, bedding plants, livestock raised for retail sales, and fresh cut flowers to name a few. Program participants will learn about each farming operation and have the opportunity to ask questions and network with others with similar interests. The program will culminate in a workshop with classroom style training in marketing skills, production techniques and discussions of the many direct marketing channels.

If you are interested in participating in this program, call the Farmers' Market Federation of New York office at (315) 475-1101.
